Difference in Climate.
Difference in Hay Prices.
When Drake Bought Grain.
Watch the Grabbers.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.

THIS WAS written at Hodge, on the Mojave Desert, east of the Cajon Pass over the mountains, 90 miles from the Los Angeles Examiner office.

Motoring to the pass from the orange groves, in blossom, and the long rows of roses in full bloom, you pass automobiles coming the other way, down from Bear Mountain. They carry bob sleds and toboggans fastened across radiator fronts, skis fastened to the running board. Crowds go up to pass the week-end in the snow, skiing, skating. Man likes change of climate and here he gets the extremes, in half a morning.

ALFALFA GROWN under irrigation on the desert, by this writer and many other farmers, also has its extremes. The best price offered here by the Southern Flour and Grain Company of Atlanta, Ga., is thirteen dollars and twenty-five cents a ton. This individual, who raises thoroughbred horses at Allaire, N. J., three thousand miles away, pays forty-five dollars a ton there. The difference is in freight and in the hay. At least 50 per cent better alfalfa here than in the East, bright green in the bale with the blue flowers still brilliant. This writer having other enterprises, real estate, etc., it does not matter. No sympathy requested. The hay will remain in fireproof storage.

THE MOST thankless job on earth is supplying for man or beast. Ask any farmer or James Minotto and his wife. He runs a big dairy farm at Phoenix, Ariz., delivers fine, excellent milk at 10 cents a quart, certified milk at 25 cents a quart, and loses money regularly. How can real farmers deliver milk to the dairy for four cents?

MR. MINOTTO raises beef cattle on a 100,000-acre ranch north of Phoenix and sells the steers as yearlings to save feed. He can tell Mr. Swift, of Chicago, that raising good cattle is philanthropy, no business. James Minotto, who has lived all over the world, says he would rather lose money in the milk business in the climate of Arizona, than make money banking in Chicago or New York.

TASTES DIFFER. Mr. Wiggin, president of the Chase National Bank, says he would rather make money banking in New York. The late Ogden Armour used to say that he wouldn't work away from the stock yards if you gave him his choice of any job on earth.

YESTERDAY WHEAT sold in Europe at the lowest price since the days of Queen Elizabeth, in the sixteenth century. You could buy grain in Liverpool as cheaply as Drake bought it, when he was provisioning his ships to rob the Spaniards. The Chicago price was better here, thanks to Uncle Sam's long pocketbook, stabilizing prices by buying and not selling, and thanks to the tariff.

WILL ROGERS knows President Hoover as well as Milton knew Cromwell. You remember how powerfully Milton used to express Cromwell's thought and purpose, usually in Latin. Saturday Rogers revealed Mr. Hoover's unwillingness to hand twenty-five millions of public money to the Red Cross, to be used in national relief. Later you read that the Senate, in rather tricky fashion, voted for the $25,000,000 Red Cross appropriation.

THE PRESIDENT as a matter of course will veto that foolishness, if it ever comes before him. When this government decided to build the Panama Canal, it did not give $300,000,000 to the Red Cross, and say "You build it." Why burden the Red Cross with drought and unemployment relief which is much too big a job, to say nothing of the overhead wastage. Private philanthropic agencies with the best of intentions, are expensive.

If you gave $25,000,000 for relief to the Red Cross and it passed the money on to the Salvation Army, and it in turn to the Y. M. C. A. and it to any one of the other benevolent agencies, when it came to paying out the money, after overhead, salaries, expenses, etc., there would be about enough left to buy three sandwiches.

A CONGRESSIONAL committee investigating Communism and Communists, report that those gentlemen and their theories are a grave menace to democratic government. The first natural question is WHAT democratic government. Where has the committee recently seen such a government. Communism means having things in common, "dividing up." Outside of the Bible, read on Sunday, you hear little about dividing. In our civilization and from those that have anything to divide, you hear nothing about dividing.

IF WE EVER get a democratic government, and it ever faces a "grave menace," it will come from gentlemen seeking to grab everything, not from would-be dividers. If Congress can take care of the grabbers, at Muscle Shoals, for instance, it need not worry about Communistic dividers. They will change their minds as soon as they get something to divide.

THE COMMITTEE says the "reds" are closely united and obey the orders of Moscow, absolutely.

That is as foolish as what the reds says of capitalism, and even more inaccurate. Where

50 INJURED AS TRAINS CRASH

Express, Speeding Through Snowstorm, Hits Local Carrying 200 Passengers

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.) More than 50 persons were injured, some of them seriously, when the New York-bound Colonial Express train, speeding through a snowstorm, and a passenger local collided at a crossover at Readville today.

Both trains were operated by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

The lomocotive of the express crashed into the rear cars of the local, overturning two of them, and then turning over on its side. The local carried about 200 passengers.

George Gladding, engineer of the express, pinned within his cab, was extricated by a rescue crew. His fireman leaped to safety.

The well is the closest of all in the local field to the Oklahoma City business district.

FOUNDATIONS OF FIVE FRAME HOUSES DESTROYED BY FIRE IN NEW HOMESTEAD HILL, MIFFLIN TOWNSHIP, TODAY

Sixteen persons fled the blaze that wiped out this row of five two-story houses in a development that two months ago petitioned for annexation to the City of Pittsburgh. Mud impeded firemen in getting to the blaze, little was saved from the homes.

FIVE FAMILIES OUSTED BY FIRE

Fire starting in the basement of the home of James Sellers, Negro fire chief of New Homestead Hill, Mifflin Township, today wiped out a row of five two-story frame dwellings, all occupied by Negroes, causing loss of $12,000. Eleven adults and five children were forced to flee.

Battalion Chief John A. Frazier of the city, responded with No. 20 Engine Company, Hays, and No. 13, Hazelwood, but they were unable to make their way through the mud in time to quell the blaze. No. 12 Company, of the South Side, later was summoned to provide a pumper and additional hose to extinguish the smolderings ruins.

In addition to Sellers, those who lost their homes were Harry Owens, Eliza Smith, Thomas Hays and Burrell Johnson. A petition for annexation of New Homestead Hill is pending in Council.

Tunney to See North China Via Marco Polo Trail

Included in the party will be Dr. John Oliver La Gorce, vice president of the National Geographic Society, and Mrs. La Gorce. The company will split at Beirut, Syria, the women going to Damascus, while the men push across the deserts and mountains of Asia.

The expedition, headed by Georges Marie Haardt, vice president of the Citroen Motor Company, is composed of 35 members, including nine scientists. It will move in a caravan of eight automobiles supplemented by caterpillar tractors and trailers. Its equipment includes talking film apparatus and a short-wave radio station

Briand's 'U. S.' Exclusive Like Real Democracy

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Briand's United States of Europe has struck a snaggle already.

The boys don't want to let the Turks in.

That starts out like a real democracy. The Soviet is also excluded. And you have never heard a senatorial squabble until you have listened to a seat being contested in 13 languages.

Now there will be two United States. When Andrew Mellon signs a dime or a dollar bill he will have to write:

"A. W. Mellon, United States. (No connection with any other firm of the same name.)"

Al Capone told Editor Eleanor Patterson that prohibition would be over in five years. Al helped himself to a 10 year's start.

BOY THIEF WINS DUEL, ESCAPES

A young gunman robbed the Hollywood Bowling Alleys in Potomac avenue, Dormont, early today, was captured as he was leaving, staged a gun battle with Officer Raymond Grogan, and escaped.

The robber, believed no older than 16, got only a few nickels from the telephone box. As he was leaving Grogan, waiting, fired a shot over his head and commanded him to halt. Grogan said of the battle:

"With his hands above his head, I marched him 25 or 35 feet down an alleyway to the rear door of a bakery, where I intended to summon aid. When I knocked on the door he wrenched away from me, ducked down behind a barrel and started shooting. We emptied our guns. He fled. It was very dark in the alley."

ADVISE FUNDS FOR ALLEGHENY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Extension of canalization on the Allegheny River between Rimerton and East Brady, Pa., was recommended in Congress by Army engineers today.

The report recommended construction of a channel of nine foot depth above Rimerton to East Brady, at an estimated cost of $3,800,000, with a $74,000 annual appropriation for operation and maintenance.

The canalization project has already been carried from the mouth of the river at Pittsburgh up to Rimerton, a distance of 61 miles. Extension of the project from Rimerton to East Brady is expected to double the present tonnage carried. Commerce on the Pittsburgh-Rimerton section in 1929 was valued at approximately $10,000,000.

PRESIDENT SCANS DRY FINDINGS

Nation's Chief Will Study Data 24 Hours, Then Submit It to Congress

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The long-awaited report of the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission, dealing with prohibition and all forms of lawlessness, was turned over to President Hoover today.

He will study it for 24 hours and then transmit it to Congress tomorrow.

Whether Mr. Hoover will accompany the report to Congress with a favorable recommendation of his own was not made known at the White House. Nor was there any official statement as to the conclusion which the commission reached in its 18 months of study and investigation.

COMPROMISE SEEN

It is understood, however, that that portion of the report dealing with prohibition is in the nature of a compromise between the dry and anti-dry factions, and that the 11 commissioners found occasion for expressing their individual views in separate statements which are attached to the body of the report.

The whole report, with the accompanying statements of the individual members, makes a bulky document of between 60,000 and 75,000 words—longer than the average popular novel. While prohibition might be said to comprise the theme song of the report, every phase of lawlessness has been gone into and recommendations made for reform.

GOES TO WHITE HOUSE

It was delivered to President Hoover personally by George W. Wickersham, chairman of the commission. He went to the White House early this morning, the bulky document under his arm, and virtually laid it on Mr. Hoover's breakfast table.

Ten men and one woman, all prominent in their respective spheres, contributed to the con-

U. S. Warned Niagara Falls Will Vanish by Erosion

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The eventual disappearance of Niagara Falls unless steps are taken to prevent erosion was predicted today by W. C. Mendenhall, acting director of the Geological Survey.

Although the process would take thousands of years, he believes the falls would be gradually flattened.

Following the rock falls at Niagara over the week end, Mr. Mendenhall recalled proposals advanced during recent years to stop the wasting away. At the instance of Congress and public organizations, such projects have been proposed, but no action has been begun.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The Niagara State Reservation Commission today ordered an aerial survey of the American falls to determine the extent of the rock slide Saturday night and Sunday, which changed the contour of the crest of the great cataract into a miniature of the Canadian "Horseshoe" Falls.

Two witnesses of the first tremendous plunges of rock and ice that rent the falls' brink were found today. One viewed the cave-in from Prospect Point, on the American side; the other watched it from below the bank on the Canadian side. Both said there were two distinct slides that sent thousands of tons of rock and ice hurtling into the lower river.

REED FAILS TO DELAY SENATE'S VOTE ON RED CROSS FUND

HOOVER VETO THREAT FAILS

Ruling by Curtis Upsets Latest White House Move; Fear Effects on Appeal

By WILLIAM S. HUTCHINSON
United Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—President Hoover's latest effort to block the proposed $25,000,000 Red Cross relief appropriation failed this afternoon when Vice President Curtis upheld a point of order against the motion of Senator Reed (Rep., Pa.) for reconsideration to delay action on the item until February 6.

The Vice President's ruling barred even a debate on the Reed motion and left adoption of the fund itself as the only question before the Senate. The point of order was made by Senator Norris (Rep., Neb.), insurgent leader.

The motion to recommit would have been rejected, although since a majority of the Senate favor immediate appropriation of the money. But for hours this afternoon administration spokesmen pleaded for delay so that the Red Cross might complete its drive for $10,000,000 in popular subscription.

PROTEST DELAY

Leaders of the Democratic-Insurgent coalition protested against delay, claiming that 100,000 persons would starve this winter in the drought-stricken states unless the government proffered immediate relief.

The technicality which blocked the Reed motion for delay was a unanimous consent agreement entered Saturday calling for a vote on adoption of the fund at 4 p. m. today. Norris points out that this agreement permitted no vote on Reed's motion. The Vice President agreed.

Reed pleaded for delay in order to give the Red Cross an opportunity to raise $10,000,000 by popular subscription for the relief of unemployed and drought sufferers.

Reed stated prospective contributors would not make donations to the Red Cross so long as the government is going to take it out of us by taxation."

The sentiment on Capitol Hill for federal aid was so strong that it appeared only a veto by President Hoover could block the appropriation. The executive's appointment of a special committee to raise relief funds by popular subscription had little effect other than to emphasize the failure to date of the American Red Cross drive for donations.

COOLIDGE LEADS DRIVE

Former President Calvin Coolidge was named honorary chairman of the President's distinguished special committee with former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, and John W. Davis, of West Virginia, defeated presidential candidates, as vice chairmen.

Gen. Pershing and Gen. Abel Davis, of Chicago, also were appointed vice chairmen. John Barton Payne, national chairman of the Red Cross, is active chairman of the committee.

In the face of this new action by the President, the Senate overwhelmingly favored the Robinson plan for a direct appropriation of $25,000,000 to the Red Cross for the purchase of food and medicine.

Wales Sails After Delay By Wreck, Landslide

SANTANDER, Spain, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, were on their way to South America today in the interest of British trade after an unexpectedly adventure-filled journey by car across Northern Spain that brought them separated through train wreck, landslide and automobile accident.

Near Lugo in Southern France a north-bound passenger train left the track and plowed up the roadbed some hours before the train bearing the British princes was due at that point.

Both princes arose to view the derailed train. It was decided to proceed by automobile to make up lost time. Their motor cavalcade was forced to detour 35 kilometers between San Sebastian and Zarauz on account of landslides that blocked the main highway.

As they proceeded over winding mountain roads and down the picturesque coast to the Bay of Biskay, their escort auto skidded twice, narrowly escaping plunging the automobile carrying the princes and themselves over a cliff.

Weary from the long trip the princes retired almost at once after boarding the steamer.

rooming house. He and Soldam had spent the evening together and had returned shortly before 2 o'clock, the sleuths said. They sat in the kitchen on the first floor, in the quarters of Charles Hoag, 41, owner of the house. Hoag and his wife, Mildred, 33, and Joseph Kaskey, 32, of 224 East Jefferson street, were in the room when they began to argue, it was said.

Detectives say the stories of the shooting differ. Mrs. Hoag says according to Scott, that Rooney had the revolver at first but gave it to Soldam, who was holding it when it went off. The bullet struck Rooney in the chest, causing his death 10 minutes later. Another story told detectives is that Rooney insulted Soldam. Soldam then drew a revolver and shot his companion, this version says.

REPORT SEIZING BEER

In addition to arresting Hoag on a suspicious person charge as a witness, police also charged him with keeping a disorderly house. According to Lieut. John Joyce, a quantity of home brew was found in the place. Upon the seizure of the home brew, Hoag was held on charges of violating the Snyder Act.

Others taken into custody for questioning are Mrs. Hoag, Mrs. Anna B. Rooney, wife of the dead man; Kaskey, visiting at the Hoag home; William Lupton, 51, of 1309 Boyle street; F. C. Eberly, 51, and Mrs. Elsie Eberly, 38, his wife, of 1307 Boyle street.

ASSEMBLYMAN'S KIN

The dead man was a nephew of James P. Rooney, representative in the Legislature and former Pitt football star. Representative Rooney was in Harrisburg when informed of the shooting early today. He immediately started for Pittsburgh.

Detectives say that Rooney had been a policeman about four years, having been dismissed last July after three previous reinstatements. He last reported to Wood Run station. Soldam came here from Detroit five weeks ago, police say, to assist a brother who at present is said to be in the county jail.

CAPITAL READY TO GREET PINCHOT

Fisher Attends Farewell Church Service; Royal Coachman for Victoria

By E. P. O'BRIEN,
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 19.—Harrisburg was preparing today to say farewell to one chief executive of the state and welcome another one tomorrow. Rain, sleet or snow is anticipated.

The speakers' stand at Third and State streets, freshly painted with its battery of amplifiers, awaits the ceremonies of inaugurating Gov.-elect Gifford Pinchot, and the final words of the retiring governor, John S. Fisher.

Strollers have been trying out the speakers' platform and the railed-off portion of the Capitol steps lounging about in spots that will be fought for tomorrow when the inaugural parade starts toward the platform.

CHURCH BIDS ADIEU

Pine Street Presbyterian Church said its formal farewell and God-speed to Gov. Fisher yesterday. At the morning service the Rev. C. Waldo Cherry, pastor, read the formal farewell which was printed in the church program. Gov. Fisher has missed hardly a Sunday during his term. The farewell message said:

"On this the last Sunday of Gov. Fisher's official residence in Harrisburg, we, the ministers and members of this church, express genuine pleasure in having had him worship with us during the past four years. It has been inspiring to the pastor and people to find that the chief executive of the state had the inclination and the time to attend divine worship on the Sabbath."

PINCHOT WATCHES SKATING

Gov.-elect Pinchot spent the day at the executive mansion in Front street. He was greatly interested in the hundreds of skaters who were finding recreation on the ice. About all he said for publication concerned the river, about which he remarked:

"I used to wish sometimes that the river would freeze entirely across so that I could walk from one bank to the other. But now that it has I don't seem to care to."

There was activity in the saddle room of the Cristnor Hunt Club, five miles from Harrisburg, where the victoria in which Pinchot will ride, drawn by two thoroughbred dapple grays, is being put through its paces in preparation for the inaugural parade.

DROVE FOR ROYALTY

The idea of the new and old governors riding in the victoria was evolved by Capt. Albert H. Stackpole, of Troop I, Pennsylvania National Guard, the governor's troop. Michael Nimeth, master of hounds at the club, is to be the coachman. As a boy he drove for the royalty in Hungary when Franz Joseph was king. The footman is Charles (Hank) Kohr, property man at a theater here. Nimeth got the job despite the fact it was ardently sought by several men who have driven governors to inaugurations in the past. Kohr was chosen because he is almost exactly the same size as Nimeth.

BILLS SHEARING P. S. C. POWER IMPEND

Measures to Be Presented In House Tonight; New Utilities Body Proposed

HARRISBURG, Jan. 19.—Two bills providing for changes in the Public Service Commission and affecting its jurisdiction in the control of public utilities companies will be presented tonight in the House of Representatives by Representative Louis W. Hagmaier, of Aspinwall.

The bills are sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Association of Boroughs. Attorney John M. Walker, of Leechburg, secretary of the organization, is here in the interest of the bills.

AMENDS CODE

One bill amends the administrative code and the other is a revision of the Public Service Company law changing provisions for its administration.

A new administrative department is provided for in the bill to be known as the Department of Public Utilities.

It provides for appointment of the commissioners by the governor and the Senate, but they can be removed by the governor.

The other bill imposes no new duties on the public service commissioners except that in some instances specified in the bill rate schedules and reports must be filed with the new department instead of with the commission. Access to records of holding companies is provided for in the bill, giving the Public Service Commission similar powers to that granted the New York commission by an act of the 1930 Legislature.

BENEFITS SEEN

Filing, accounting, investigation and the initiation of proceedings and their prosecution, new duties of the commission, are powers that are relegated to the new department by the bill.

The proponents of the bill claim that the Public Service Commission will be made more responsive to the public by the change in the method of appointment, and easy removal, and that the rights of the public are better protected by the making the prosecution of its complainants easier and less expensive.

PINCHOT TO ACT FOR RELIEF

clusions in the report. Besides Chairman Wickersham, who was Taft's attorney general, they were: Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, Va., lawyer; Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, secretary of war in the Wilson administration; Ada L. Comstock, of Cambridge, Mass., dean of Radcliffe College; William I. Grubb, U. S. district judge, Birmingham, Ala.; William S. Kenyon, U. S. circuit judge, Fort Dodge, Ia.; Monte M. Lemann, professor of law at Tulane University, New Orleans; Frank J. Loesch, lawyer, of Chicago; Kenneth McIntosh, U. S. district judge, Seattle, Wash.; Paul J. McCormick, U. S. district judge, Los Angeles; Roscoe Pound, dean of the Harvard law school.

PROPOSED IN CAMPAIGN

The commission was conceived during the hectic Hoover-Smith presidential campaign in 1928. Answering Gov. Smith's demand for prohibition reform, Mr. Hoover said that if he were elected President he would appoint a commission of outstanding character to conduct a thorough investigation into the whole prohibition structure, and intimated that he would be guided in his future policy by its recommendations.

After he was elected and inaugurated, Mr. Hoover broadened the scope of the commission's work to include "all forms of lawlessness." This led to some criticism in Congress, and the President was accused of altering the purpose for which Congress had appropriated half a million dollars. Nevertheless, the commission proceeded to consider all phases of the law enforcement problem besides prohibition.

ASSEMBLED IN 1929.

The commission assembled in the summer of 1929 and was given a free hand to conduct the investigation in its own way. When President Hoover received the members at the White House, upon their assembly in Washington, he delivered a terse speech outlining the purposes of the inquiry "into all forms of lawlessness" and then virtually washed his hands of the matter so far as guidance was concerned.

Today's report is not the first to emerge from the commission.

A year ago this month, after there had been criticism in Congress over the delay and the manner in which the commission was conducting its inquiry, Chairman Wickersham made a partial report to Mr. Hoover, which he communicated to Congress.

RECOMMENDED CHANGES

This partial report proposed changes in court procedure, recommended that a scheme of "jury-less trials" be set up for minor offenders, and proposed modification of the drastic Jones act, under which it is possible to impose a five-year penitentiary sentence and a $10,000 fine for any violation of the prohibition law, no matter how trivial.

The commission set forth that the very severity of this act defeated its purpose, and Congress was favorably impressed by the argument. It accordingly modified the Jones act by the Stobbs bill, which President Hoover signed just a few days ago. This modification bill created a class of "misdemeanors" in prohibition enforcement, where all had been felonies in the Jones act.

Spending to Save People Is Thrift, Says Coolidge

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 19.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The third week of January has been designated as a time for considering the advantages of thrift, perhaps in part because it follows the birthday of Benjamin Franklin.

Thrift does not mean parsimony. It is not to be in any way identified with the miser. The thrifty person is one who does the best that is possible to provide for suitable discharge of the future duties of life. In its essence it is self control. Industry and judgment are required to achieve it. Contentment and economic freedom are its fruits.

Calvin Coolidge

Most frequently we identify the thought of thrift with various institutions that have been provided to make it effective. We associate savings banks and insurance companies prominently among its agencies. But the main principle is saving today something that will be useful tomorrow. The whole theory of conservation is included. Money is only an incident.

Just at present we need to apply the principle to saving and increasing the strength of our governmental and social structure as well as our economic fabric. We must not squander these precious possessions. And above all a wise thrift now calls for the expenditure of money to save people.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

PREMIER MACDONALD ASSURES INDIA OF DOMINION STATUS

BOW TRIAL JUDGE BARS GOSSIP

Court Prevents 'It' Girl's Secretary From Continuing Mud-Slinging on Stand

By LYLE ABBOTT.
International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—Judge William C. Doran, presiding over the grand theft trial of Daisy DeVoe, accused of embezzling from Clara Bow, the screen star, today opened the hearing by declaring against scandal in the trial record.

Miss DeVoe demure and pretty, sat on the witness stand ready to testify while Judge Doran, as he expressed it, "took a hand in the case." He said:

"No trial of this kind should be allowed to degenerate into a mud-slinging carnival. The issues are clean cut. The question is, did Miss DeVoe steal the money as charged?"

MISS DE VOE ANNOYED

Miss DeVoe, who had promised testimony about the private life of Miss Bow, her one-time employer, sat with a pained expression on her face. She had a new marcel for her sleek blonde hair.

Judge Doran said this was a "criminal, not a civil trial" and that is was extremely costly to handle. He said:

"It has taken special officers to control the crowds in the halls and courtroom. With proper co-operation of the state and defense we should be able to complete this case in a few hours."

The fireworks started over the first question addressed to Miss DeVoe by Defense Attorney Freeman.

JUDGE INTERRUPTS

Freeman asked Miss DeVoe if it wasn't a fact that after she would spend her own money for Miss Bow, she would then take funds from the Clara Bow special account to reimburse herself. Judge Doran interrupted:

"Wait just a moment before that question is answered."

Then he launched into his analysis of the rights of state and defense to inquire into Miss Bow's affairs.

Miss Bow, meanwhile, was said at her home to be in a state of partial physical and nervous collapse aggravated by the strain of the trial. A heavy cold which frequently interrupted her testimony last week continued to annoy her, and her bronchial tubes were said to be affected to some extent.

It was stated that unless she takes an unexpected turn for the better, she may not return to court for several days.

Authorities promised an important announcement in the case today. Other new evidence also has been unearthed, it was said.

Water Held Blameless For 'Flu' Cases Here

Triple checked tests of Pittsburgh's water supply and an epidemiological survey among the city's medical profession have satisfied state and city health authorities that the water is not responsible for the mild epidemic of gastro-intestinal trouble prevalent in this district for the past few weeks.

The malady, of a mild influenzal type, according to most physicians, has the medical profession for the most part baffled. Practically all agree that the ailment is of an infectious nature, but its origin remains a mystery.

The cell form of animal life and common cause of disentery is entirely missing in laboratory tests of water taken from the streams in and around the city and for miles above the filtration plant intakes. The vegetable form of life to be found in stagnant water is also absent. The bacterial count, according to a statement by Dr. C. B. Maits, director of the Department of Health, is normal and chlorine content of the water also is normal. Nor does chlorine affect the water's taste, according to Dr. Maits.

Pittsburgh's chlorine content is below that of other large cities, Dr. Maits pointed out.

He was only slightly cut and bruised.

Dope Carrier Seized, 3 Face Indictment

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(Universal.)—Three financiers of a city drug smuggling ring are expected to be indicted today as a result of testimony given to a grand jury by Jacob Bloom, arrested as he stepped from the liner Ile de France with drugs valued at $300,000 in his suitcase.

As this became known it was also disclosed that federal agents have secretly arrested a Broadway night club man, reputed to stand next to the "higher-up" of the ring, in connection with the $1,000,000 narcotic seizure in Brooklyn six weeks ago.

TOM MIX READY FOR ERIE SUIT

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Swinging off the train in cowboy regalia, Tom Mix, circus and screen hero, today was prepared to resist the attempts of Zack Miller, owner of the 101 Ranch, who is suing the actor here for $325,000 damages for breach of contract.

Legal advisers and aids of John Ringling were said to have accompanied Mix here. He is reported to have signed a new five-year contract with the Ringling circus.

Mrs. Stokes Mix, the cowboy's third wife, with two officials of the 101 Ranch and Miller were prepared to press the charges against Mix.

Miller, adorned with a sombrero, drawled out to visitors here:

"We don't want to bring any dirt into the court proceedings here, but, if Mix starts here, as he did down in Mississippi a few weeks ago, we got a lot to sling. Mrs. Stokes Mix testified for me down in Mississippi and she's going to testify for me here."

Mix told newspapermen he was going to begin making talking movies as soon as he is through with the court actions. Mix was divorced from his third wife last December 24.

HELEN SUBMITS BILL OF RIGHTS

PARIS, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—A "bill of rights" defining the legal status of Queen Helen of Rumania has been drawn up by her attorneys for submittal to King Carol as a basis for continued separation from him, it was revealed today.

In her statement, the Queer demanded right of residence in Bucharest and freedom of movement in or out of Rumania as well as her own retinue. In return, she promised complete abstention from politics.

In regard to Prince Michael, she asked that he be permitted to live with her and that the selection of tutors and studies, and the care of his health, be left in her hands. King Carol, however, would be granted the right of seeing his son frequently.

The Queen further specified that her government revenue be paid to her by the treasury instead of the King personally, and that her son's revenue go to the upkeep of her household.

SHE DIES ALONE, ONCE IN SOCIETY

The body of Mrs. Cecelia Marchand, once prominent in society circles, that lay unclaimed in the county morgue for 24 hours, today was claimed by relatives. Mrs. Marchand was found dead in her room at 302 Sandusky street, Saturday. A physician attributed death to asthma.

Mrs. Marchand had earned a livelihood by selling cosmetics and beauty aids on the North Side. Through her effects morgue attaches communicated with acquaintances who told them the dead woman was the wife of Dr. John L. Marchand. The physician is said to be practicing medicine in Texas.

While the couple resided on the North Side, Mrs. Marchand was well known in social activities, according to deputy coroners. Later the physician and his wife were said to have separated.

CAPONE'S LIST EXPOSES GRAFT

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Records described by prosecutors as revealing "astounding graft" that reached into high places was in possession of the law today for presentation to the special grand jury investigating the police department.

The records were seized from two safes found in the Rex Hotel, headquarters on the South Side for henchmen of Al "Scarface" Capone, in an early Sunday morning raid. Assistant State's Attorneys Charles J. Mueller and Charles E. Lounsbury said they showed dealings between Capone gangsters, politicians, policemen and public officials whose names they "did not even dare to talk about."

SHOT BY SLAIN GIRL'S FATHER

PORT ARTHUR, Tex., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—A. B. Jonnson, 40, whose comely 16-year-old daughter was shot to death recently, was bound over to the grand jury without bond today on a charge of slaying Otis Lee Adams, 22, oil company ambulance driver, who had been one of her companions. Johnson, under $10,000 bond, would not explain why he shot Adams Saturday night.

Police Chief M. B. Word said investigators knew only that Adams, although married, had been "going with" the girl, Elizabeth, that her fiance, Robert Williams, 18, student at the University of Texas, objected, and estrangement of Williams and the girl followed.

PEACE OFFER MADE TO GANDHI

50,000 Political Prisoners To Be Freed if Disorder Ceases; Home Rule Won

LONDON, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Ramsay MacDonald today brought the Indian round table conference to a close, extending a welcoming hand to India as a dominion in the British commonwealth of nations with full responsible self-government.

The work begun at London will be continued without interruption, he said, and the new Indian constitution will be passed through the British Parliament as soon as it is completed.

This pronouncement of British policy pledged liberation to India's 50,000 political prisoners if "civil quiet is proclaimed and assured" in India.

SUPPORT PLEDGED

In a long declaration of British government policy, which the prime minister read carefully, the weight of government support was pledged to the findings of the committee of the round table conference, which has been laboring in London for two months.

These envisage a national federal government of India along the general lines of the United States Congress, with a Senate and House of Representatives, and with the executive power in the hands of a governor general, who will have a cabinet of responsible Indian ministers chosen from the National Assembly.

The governor general will wield authority as the British sovereign's nominal executive, as in other British dominions.

During the period of transition the financial powers of the new Indian government and the fields of defense and foreign relations will be safeguarded by reservations placing them within the jurisdiction of the British imperial government.

APPEAL TO GANDHI

MacDonald held out the olive branch to Gandhi and the Indian extremists, declaring that steps would be taken to permit all elements in India who wish to do so to participate in the negotiations which began here.

He said also that the necessary steps would be taken for the separation of Burma from India. This was an outstanding issue of the conference.

The Indians, said the prime minister, must settle their own communal disputes, for Britain is neither pro-Hindu, pro-Moslem nor pro-any section of the Indian population. He added:

"The attitude of the British government is nothing more than an overpowering desire to let you settle your own affairs."

He said he did not like the idea of placing "safeguards" about the proposed Indian government, but he pointed out that they exist in every constitution in the world.

NEGRO PERILED BY MOB DIES

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Death in the form of peritonitis claimed Lemian McDaniel, Negro, at midnight, and dispersed a mob of 1,500 bent on lynching who milled about the hospital where he was being treated for wounds suffered in a police gun fight. The shooting was fatal to two officers.

The crowd began to climb an unguarded fire escape to the Negro ward on the third floor, but left after three of the group were shown the body.

The Negro was brought to the hospital after a gambling raid Saturday night upon his store, which was led by three policemen with faces blackened.

In the battle Teddy Williams and Lee Allen Williams, policemen, were shot dead.

McDaniel denied shooting the officers, naming another Negro, who was arrested and spirited away to a jail.

S. A. Jones, the third policeman, escaped the bullets by lying on the grocery floor. He said McDaniel fired the fatal shots.

2 HELD IN STORE WINDOW THEFT

Detected, police say, stealing women's wearing apparel from a store window they had shattered with a rock, two Negroes were arrested after a chase early today. They are James Pinkston, 25, and his brother, Vaughn, 23, of 226 South Twenty-first street.

Patrolman Ward Saunders reported he heard a crash of glass and discovered the men taking dresses from the store of Otto Barcangelis, 1900 Forbes street. As he approached they fled stopping when he fired two shots at them.

DO-X PREPARES TO CROSS SEA

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Jan. 19.—(Universal)—While Rio de Janeiro is still celebrating the trans-Atlantic flight of the Italian air squadron under Gen. Italo Balbo, the 12-engined DO-X is quietly being made ready at Lisbon for the take-off between January 30 and February 5 for the Brazilian capital on a similar flight.

Repairs necessitated by the burning of one wing have been completed, and it is expected the first trial flight of the giant German seaplane over Lisbon will be made Monday.

The DO-X will have 15 people aboard on the trans-Atlantic flight; 17 if Karl Von Wiegand, correspondent, goes along and Lady Drummond Hay accepts the invitation extended her by Dr. Dornier, the ship's designer and builder.

The most noted of the passengers is expected to be the famous Portuguese navigator, Admiral Countinho, first to fly the South Atlantic. He is well past 60.

From Rio de Janeiro, where it will fly via the Azores and Cape Verde Islands, the DO-X's schedule calls for a flight north to New York, stopping, among other points, at Havana and perhaps at Miami. It will be the first time in history that 17 persons have flown the Atlantic in one plane.

Play February 12 To Benefit Jobless

A benefit for the unemployed in the form of a play will be presented Thursday night, February 12, in Moose Temple. The play, "The Gold Star Mother," is by Dr. Earl J. Cox, of Penn avenue, and is sponsored by the Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of Old St. Patrick's Church.

DRIVER IN CRASH GASSED, SAVED

Although Charles F. Doscher, 25, of 510 Teece avenue, Bellevue, escaped injury in an automobile collision, his life was imperiled by carbon-monoxide gas when he was trapped in his closed car. Chief Daniel Rosemeier and Lieut. Thomas Bigley, of Bellevue police, dragged Doscher from the machine shortly after it had collided with one driven by Frank J. Black, Jr., of 221 Noble avenue, Crafton, in North Balph avenue, Bellevue, last night.

A physician who attended Doscher at the Bellevue police station said he had been partly overcome by gas from the car before the crash and probably would have died if he had not been rescued promptly. All windows in the car were closed tightly, Lieut. Bigley said. Black was uninjured.

PRIEST WINS AT CLAIRTON

By order of Judge Elder W. Marshall today the trustees of the First Slavish Roman Catholic Greek Rite Church of Clairton are restrained from preventing the installation of a priest, the Rev. Peter Molchany.

The trustees were directed to give the Rev. Molchany the keys to the parish house and open the doors of the church.

Twelve members of the congregation asked for the order. They contended that the trustees wanted to sell the church property and dissolve the congregation.

Venares Deporting Studied by Clunk

Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk announced today that he was trying to learn whether George Venares can be deported. Venares, when he was arrested last week on an assault and battery charge, was identified as the prisoner who had escaped from the County Home in Woodville in 1911. He had been sent to the home when he was adjudged insane after killing a Wilkinsburg waitress.

U. S. IN TOUCH WITH LEAGUE

GENEVA, Jan. 19.—Although the United States is not a member of the League of Nations, Arthur Sweetser, an American employe of the league's information section, declares he sends reports direct to the State Department.

This is in line with his task as an official of the league in attempting to reverse "the policy of my country" in staying out of the league, Sweetser explains.

Meanwhile, a veritable hornet's nest of trouble faced the League of Nations Council as its sixty-second session started today.

As if agreeing on a date for the proposed world disarmament conference were not enough, the council must try to solve a quarrel between Germany and Poland over the treatment of German minorities in Upper Silesia.

RAIDERS SEIZE MACHINE RIFLE

An automatic machine rifle, said to have been seized by constables and prohibition agents in a raid on a dwelling at 6521 Darlington road, was in the possession of county detectives today.

Lena Weiner, arrested in the raid, according to the agents, and released on a $1,000 bond for a hearing before Justice of the Peace W. S. Edwards, of Glenfield, denied knowledge of the presence of the weapon. The raid, staged Saturday, yielded the agents five quarts of brandy, 12 quarts of whisky, six quarts of gin and seven gallons of wine, they reported.

BUS CARRYING 25 DITCHED

CHESTER, W. Va., Jan. 19.—A Greater Stages bus carrying about 25 passengers was wrecked when it skidded into a ditch on the Lincoln highway, near Clinton, Pa., while en route from East Liverpool, O., to Pittsburgh, shortly before last midnight.

Police said one passenger, a man, who was cut by flying glass, was taken to Pittsburgh.

The bus, with the front caved in, was brought here today.

Roman 'Armshake' Urged as Sanitary

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—To remove the peril of transmission of germs by handshaking, the old Roman arm grasp as a substitute salutation was suggested today by Dr. J. Harper Blaisdell, dermatologist, lecturer at Harvard medical school. Dr. Blaisdell said disease germs may be passed on in the hearty handclasp of a friend who had just grasped a handrail, car strap or doorknob.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

13 Spades Baffle Woman Bridge Player

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 19.—Mrs. Ethel Meyer held 13 spades in a bridge game, but failed to take a single trick.

It happened this way.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer were playing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Johns. Mrs. Meyer was the partner of Johns.

Throughout the evening the bidding has been conservative. Suddenly it leaped up. Starting with one spade, it was bid by Mrs. Meyer, it mounted to six clubs, the offer of Mrs. Johns.

It was Mrs. Meyer's time to bid. She turned to her opponent, husband.

"Darling, what does one do when one has 13 spades?"

came.

VETS DEMAND CASH BONUS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19.—More than 3,000 veterans of the World War, gathered in mass meeting at Patriotic Hall here, have adopted unanimously a resolution memorializing Congress to pass a bill for immediate cash payment of the full face value of the bonus.

No voice was raised in opposition though John E. Staley, chairman, invited full and free discussion.

There were hisses and boos when Patriot mentioned Secretary Mellon and later the President as opponents on cash payment.

Col. Herbert R. Fay declared:

"Congress desires to know what the war veterans want. It does not want one man to speak for 7,000,000 of them."

CLUB REPEATS MINSTRELS

The Golden Rule Club of the Twenty-seventh Ward today announced that a minstrel show and entertainment given last week in the Oliver High School for benefit of unemployed families of the ward would be repeated January 29 in North Side Carnegie Music Hall.

Nearly 1500 were unable to get seats at Friday's performance, it was said. About $4,000 was raised which will be turned over to the Neighborhood Club, a women's organization which has been doing relief work in the district for 20 years. Alderman George A. Young is heading the activity.

GUNMEN BIND, ROB DRUGGIST

Two young gunmen bound and gagged E. L. Steigleder, 56, proprietor of a drug store at 3301 Brighton road, today after compelling him to open the safe, and escaped with $175.

The two entered the store while Steigleder was alone, he informed police, and ordered soft drinks. As he was serving them they pointed revolvers at him and forced him into the rear of the store, where they bound him.

Steigleder freed himself in five minutes and notified police. He said one of the robbers had been in the store yesterday.

HOLLYWOOD AND NEW YORK CHAT WITH THEATER NEWS AND REVIEWS

Mary Nolan, Who Once Was Imogene Wilson, Is Out at Studio

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 19.

Another episode in the turbulent career of Mary Nolan is closed with the failure of Universal to take up its option on the blonde star's contract.

Crashing the front pages as Imogene Wilson the press took her beauty and her passionate talent to Germany where she became Mary Nolan and where she made pictures for the famous U. F. A. Company.

Mary Nolan.

John Considine, then United Artists executive, discovered her and signed her to come to Hollywood. She appeared in "Sorrel and Son" and shortly after this left United and went to Universal.

That was almost three years ago. During this time Miss Nolan has repeatedly demonstrated her ability and glamor, but has had a succession of ill health and bad publicity breaks.

News of her departure from the Laemmle studio came as a surprise, as she had been announced for "Waterloo Bridge." Robert Sherwood's play of last season.

The actress' future plans are unknown and she was reported out of town yesterday.

HOLLYWOOD

Out at Universal they tell it as a true story that a sweet young thing gushed to Professor Einstein:

"Oh, Mr. Einstein, I was so sorry to see that you weren't to direct 'An American Tragedy.'"

LATEST GOSSIP

A preview of Clara Bow's latest picture, "No Limit," discloses a reference to the famous 50-cent chip gambling episode in Nevada. In the picture, Clara says she once played with a 50-cent chip in Monte Carlo and didn't know it represented $100. . . . Exploitation of other Paramount Pictures is cleverly introduced in "No Limit." A Theatre marquis carries an advertisement of "Fighting Caravans," with Gary Cooper, while Clara mentions Nancy Carroll, "The Love Parade" and "Monte Carlo" . . . Charlie Chaplin has composed all the music for the score of "City Lights," with the exception of a single theme song for the girl. He picks it out on a piano and a musician arranges it. . . . Janet Gaynor is due here on the twenty-third from Honolulu, where she underwent an appendicitis operation. Her husband, Lydell Peck, accompanies her. . . . Dick Arlen and Jobyna Ralston also are expected home from the islands around the end of the month. . . . George O'Brien, the star, and John Ford, the director, are leaving on a freighter for a four months trip to the Philippines, Japan and China. . . . Even a contract doesn't always mean a chance in Hollywood. Fox has been paying Yvonne Pelletier regular salary checks for a year and a half and she hasn't made a picture.

SEEK SPORTS STARS

Following up its signing of Bobby Jones to make a series of golf shorts, Warner Brothers have invaded the racing field to put Earle Sande, famous jockey, under contract. He'll do both shorts and character roles. All the studios were aroused to the value of authentic sport subjects by the success of the Knute Rockne series.

Ends Torture From Sour, Gassy, Acid Stomach

New Prescription Gives Remarkable Results

The acid stomach victim makes evident his vicious power everywhere. Gases, belching, bad temper, pain after eating, d'zziness, heartburn, tendency to catch cold easily, sleeplessness often results from acid stomach. Sufferers are personally uncomfortable and make others unhappy.

Doctors say, "End the acid condition that penetrates into the intestines, causing sourness, inflammation and spreads acid poisons through the system." The best way to end acid conditions is the new prescription ACIDINE.

"I had a miserable case of acid indigestion for the past three years," writes Miss Adeline Belmont, Brooklyn, N. Y. "Tried everything with poor results. Ate very little if any sweets. Then heard about ACIDINE and got some. It was wonderful. I can eat everything and delighted without fear of pain. Sleep fine."

Almost everyone who takes ACIDINE raves about it. More than two million packages have been sold. It's absolutely amazing the way this new prescription succeeds when other known remedies fail.

ACIDINE is the only known remedy which contains Zaptase, that laboratory tests digests 3,000 times its weight of certain starchy foods which cause trouble. It neutralizes harmful acids, soothes irritated stomach linings, stops gases, headaches, sleeplessness and nervousness. No other known remedy contains this combination to end acid stomach. ACIDINE also fortifies you against colds by reducing acidity.

Get ACIDINE today at your druggist. Watch how quick acid indigestion, gas, sour stomach, belching, headaches, dizziness, fullness after eating disappear. Get drunk all about ACIDINE and get some. If you want Marker refunds money if it is wonderful. I can eat everything and delighted

Marion Davies Stars :-: In Belasco Success :-: 'The Bachelor Father'

Marion Davies is touched by C. Aubrey Smith's affection in this scene from "The Bachelor Father," her new starring picture. It is based on the Belasco stage success.

In this scene Miss Davies pleads with Quinn Williams to take her with him. It is one of the dramatic moments in the picture, which was directed by Robert Z. Leonard.

Ralph Forbes is seen with Miss Davies in this episode from "The Bachelor Father." A large cast appears in the film, including David Torrence, Doris Lloyd, Edgar Norton, Nena Quartaro.

VAUDEVILLE GLORIFIED AND LUPE VELEZ OPEN DAVIS

By GEORGE SEIBEL

According to the dictionary "glorified" means "made glorious," and that's what brought overflowing houses into the long-dark Davis Theater on Saturday. They saw good, honest vaudeville and probably their only complaint was that there wasn't more of it. The bill contained a liberal quota of comedy, which everybody seemed to enjoy hugely, and a minimum of noofing, which people have been fed up on. Then there was a dog circus that surely pleased the children of all ages, for Carlton Emmy's Madwags are both acrobats and comedians.

George Seibel

LITA GREY CHAPLIN

The headliner was Lita Grey Chaplin, who has a voice that is easy to listen to and some songs that are not hard to sing.

Leavitt and Lockwood provided a miniature Revue, with everything the big revues have except the glitter and vulgarity. This little show moved fast and kept 'em laffin.

But most of the mirth was caused by Talent and Merit, a pair of comedians who engage in an amusing debate about the talents and merits of Man and Woman.

"EAST IS WEST"

The screen feature was Lupe Velez in "East Is West," a picture in which she is a Chinese slave girl that a rich young American falls in love with. Lew Ayres is the rich young American. It's a nice modern fairy tale in which Lupe Velez can be cute, and her lover can be heroic, while a villainous chop suey king is foiled when he tries to capture the dainty Ming Foy.

Chicago Symphony Plays Here Tonight

More than 100 players are required for the Strauss Tone Poem, "Ein Heldenleben," which will be included in the program to be given tonight in Syria Mosque by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Frederick Stock is the conductor. Mischa Mischakoff, young Russian artist, will play a violin obligato in this work. In addition to "Ein Heldenleben," other important works on the program are the Mozart G Minor Symphony, the Overture "Husitska," by Dvorak, and Debussy's "Iberia." Images for Orchestra, depicting "In the Streets by the Wayside," "The Perfumes of the Night," and "The Morning of a Fete Day."

Pioneer Oil Man Dies in Chicago

OIL CITY, Pa., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The death of Col. Andrew J. Greenfield in Chicago severed one of the last links between the petroleum industry of the past and that of the present—the old industry with its exchanges, boom towns and restricted territory, and the news of world-wide holdings and huge developments.

Col. Andrew Jackson Greenfield, 95, had an active part in what was termed the "oil excitement," those days when the oil industry of Northwestern Pennsylvania was practically that of the world during the score of years following the drilling of the first well in 1859.

Kathryn Meisle, contralto, replaced Piatigorsky at the Young Men and Women's Hebrew Association last night, and made a most favorable impression. She is one of the most satisfactory singers among our native talent, and though heard several times in our concert halls, has never before had so excellent an opportunity to prove abilities.

J. Fred Lissfelt

The program was well balanced and there was little discernible lessening in interest as the evening progressed. Some of the songs, to be sure, were old timers, but like the "Cry of Rachel" and "Nur Wer die Sehnsucht Kennt" they have so long been absent from our programs that they had rather fresh flavor.

An occasional emphasis between the registers of her voice slightly shocks the listener when Miss Meisle takes her topmost notes unnaturally brightening, sometimes making them in fortissimo too strident. But the middle and deep voice is exceedingly beautiful and expressive. In the "Rienzi" air her dramatic accents were finely reckoned, and as encore she gave the "Una voce poco fa" in the original contralto with quite a flair for the floritura.

Miss Meisle's singing is further marked by fine diction, a gracious personality, and a sense to please. It goes without saying that she became a favorite at once. Solon Alberti placed accompaniments.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

FUN, TUNES, MYSTERY WEEK'S STAGE BILL

The Nixon will be the scene of a world premiere tonight, when Schwab & Mandel's new musical production, "America's Sweetheart," will be presented with a cast including Jack Whiting, Gus Shy and Jeanne Aubert.

In the Alvin tonight "Mandel, Inc.," a New York and Chicago comedy success, will be shown. The company features Joe Smith, Charles Dale and Alexander Carr.

Next week's attraction in the Alvin will be "Young Sinners," with the original New York cast, including Dorothy Appleby, Raymond Guion and John Harrington.

The George Sharp Players in the Pitt, beginning tonight, will offer "The Ninth Guest," a mystery melodrama.

The Pitt offering next week will be a comedy, "Apron Strings."

Blue Law Battle Hits Sunday Shows

DENNISON, O., Jan. 19.—Jacob Smith, owner of Lincoln Theater here, was bound over to Tuscarawas County grand jury by Mayor Robert Maxwell on a charge of operating a Sunday show.

Charges against New Philadelphia's two theaters which operated yesterday were to be filed today by a lay representative of the city ministerial association. No attempt was made to halt the shows.

OUR HEROINE PURSUES TRUE LOVE SOUL IN HARRIS

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"She Got What She Wanted," comedy romance of a sort, is the new screen attraction in the Harris. As a stage play it was footlight fodder in our town, not so long ago. Then the stage players tried valiantly to make something of its rather impossible plot and characters without so very much success. And, as a movie, it fares no better—if as well.

It chiefly concerns a heroine who is on a rather meaningless pursuit of the soul of true love. She divorces her husband, marries the star boarder and ends up with her husband again. In between times a gabbing vaudeville performer appears and re-appears like a Thurston rabbit. His presence is welcome, because it brings some relieving comedy.

Betty Compson is cast—or is it miscast?—as the heroine. She has the difficult time of trying to talk like a Russian lady who hasn't been in America so very many years. Alan Hale and Lee Tracy also are prominent. Mr. Tracy, "The Front Page" hero of the stage, portrays the gabbing actor.

The stage presents five acts of vaudeville, featuring Victor Graff, erstwhile Harris M. C., who now is seen in his own act.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 19.—(AP.)—Luther Emich, 62, of Charleston, instructor of manual arts at the Montcoal High School, was killed when his automobile veered from the road and plunged down an embankment.

Emich was alone in the machine. He is survived by his widow, four daughters and one son.

McMurray Woman Dies at Age of 83

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 19.—Mrs. Jane E. Wright, 83, one of the oldest residents of the McMurray section, died in the home of her niece and nephew, with whom she lived.

Briand's 'U. S.' Is Exclusive

United States Steel board, says we should all get together.

All right, Myron, any chance of us getting together on the U. S. Steel board?

Most prominent Long Island commuter left Buckingham Palace for South America yesterday. When Eddie gets here we will have to ask him how he enjoyed his stay in England.

After studying Russia we finally realize what happens to five-year plans, New Year resolutions and long term instalments. They become Wickersham reports.

Illinois doctors have cornered the champ headache of the world.

They call it migraine.

It's one of those things you can't check with your hat.

It belongs on Teddy Roberts. At the age of 23 Teddy has hoarded that chronic migraine for 12 years.

This is a tribute to compulsory education.

The doctors of the University of Illinois selected Teddy's migraine from 750 applicants whose migraine just fell short of 1930 plans and specifications.

They will study, dose, drug and diagnose Ted's mansard slope.

If his headache is not yet permanent they are starting out splendidly to clinch it.

We know how to make it worse. Ask him to wear a fireman's wet hat.

We always thought that the best way to cure a man's knob tatic was to let him alone.

Of course a university extension course is a higher form of scholastic migraine.

We don't know much about class rooms but we do know that the outline of history takes some funny shapes.

The minute Ted matriculates in cerebral pyrotechnics they will put him on the football team and kick h[illegible] in the face.

In about five years he will become so highly specialized that he will be able to shout through a megaphone.

It's great when you reach that stage. An anonymous letter doesn't help you a bit.

Then they hand him a diploma and he launches his career with a certified headache with a gold seal on it. This gives him a 50-year start on the average businessman.

Not having a headache these Republican days is a daring bit of individuality.

If Ted likes company, and would like to consult an authority on the subject just drop a line to the writer. It's the house with the busted roof on the third hill from the railroad depot.

Things I Never Knew Till Now
(But which you knew all along!)

That the Great White Way from 42nd st. to 51st st. has less than 40 lamp posts that are under city supervision. Without them the City Fathers would deem the Main Stem inadequately lighted!!!

That Helen Morgan's real name is Helen Riggin.

That the physical director of the Y. M. C. A. at Augusta, Ga., is said to be named Cash Register. (But don't quote me.)

That the West 47th St. station house has a wider variety of cases on its hands every 24 hours than any other precinct in the world.

That cigars originally had bands in order to protect the fingers of the young Spaniards, who, in Cuba, smoked their cigars semi-moist. Later, however, the manufacturers saw the advantage of decorating the band with their name and trademark.

That hot coffee will remove food stains from dark clothes immediately. (No, and it won't leave a java stain, either!)

That the first thing to compel waiters to give up their profession is leg trouble.

That a subway ride from Coney Island to 242nd St. and back is almost as far as a trip to Philly. The fare is only five cents!

That Civil Service applicants for Police and Fire department jobs who are lacking in height are stretched as much as an inch prior to the examination. It is done through a Turkish bath process.

That Texas has a "peonage" law that forbids a man working a farm for another removing his belongings from the premises between sunset and sunup.

That Lynchburg, Va., has a street so steep that an automobile has never been driven up it. And the sidewalk has a hand rail.

That Brewster County, Texas, is as large in area as R. I.

That Liszt wrote "Liebestraum" in a monastery, whence he had fled from his "heart." The melody has been borrowed a dozen times.

That the woman who inspired the song "Darling Nellie Gray" died last month. She was Mrs. Katherine Hanby, of California. Her husband wrote the famous ballad, which brought him nothing.

That in Havana, Cuba, if you are hit by an auto they arrest you!

That Bilgray's Cabaret in Colon, Panama, has a special "Hallelujah Cocktail" invented in honor of the visit of Aimee Semple McPherson.

That the highest temperature in Tampa, Fla., last winter was 94½, and there has never been a case of sunstroke recorded.

That a man in Texas known as "Snake King" makes a living catching rattlesnakes and removing the poison bags, for sale to carnivals, circuses, etc.

That there is a stretch of highway between Detroit and Pontiac, Mich., on which there is no speed limit

That if you "hit" a man in Kansas you're liable to a prison sentence for assault, while if you tell the judge you merely "walloped" him, the most you can get is a fine and verbal lashing.

That it is easier for a woman to get in the Hall of Fame than a man. (In the case of a man 51 votes are required, and in the case of a woman, 47.)

That American Indians were the first users of "wireless." They placed hollow logs on end in a river, and beat the uppermost end with a club. Water being the best conductor, the signals were carried several miles in each direction and were received by men holding their ears to similar logs standing in the river.

That a man named Swallow ran for the Prohibition Party in 1904.

That the oldest piece of furniture in the world is the throne of the Egyptian Queen Hetshepsu, which is in the London Museum.

That according to Dr. Karl Menninger, in "The Human Mind," even the best poker player cannot inhibit the dilation of his pupils upon completing a straight flush on a two-card draw.

That the native African is scrupulously honest. One may leave his property around without danger, since the native will not touch what does not belong to him. It is part of his social ethics.

That the notch in the head of an ax is not to pull nails with, but to hang it up with. (Have yourself a preposition.)

That a group of radical students at N. Y. U. surreptitiously placed a bust (plaster) of Eugene Debs in the Hall of Fame one recent night, which was removed by a watchman the next morning and turned over to the university authorities, who have kept strictly mum.

That Windsor, Ontario, Canada, is south of Detroit, Michigan.

That in the garment manufacturing sector (in the latter 30's) there is an Irishman, with a thick brogue, who sells nothing but Jewish newspapers.

That it takes light 499 seconds to reach earth from the sun. From the nearest star it takes four and three-tenths yrs to get here.

That most people think that "asocial" person means a social person, but it means just the opposite—an unsocial one.

That when a prize fighter commences to tip his hat to telephone poles he is considered punch drunk.

And that you cannot judge hard times by the breadlines, most of them being composed of reporters trying to get stories.

CHURCH URGES CLASS TO QUIT

Members of the Callender Bible Class who withdrew from the South Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Wilkinsburg, several years ago because of dissension with the church officials, have been asked to sign withdrawals from the congregation. Members of the class have not been meeting on the church property for some time.

Letters were sent out by the Rev. Dr. John M. Versteeg, pastor of the church, to members of the class who have been conducting services elsewhere. He declared that it was just a matter of straightening out church records.

The notices were on church stationery. Class members were asked to sign and return slips on which was printed:

"Please withdraw my name from membership of the South Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church."

Trouble between the class and the church board followed the removal by the board of Dr. T. Morton Sankey, teacher of the class. Members of the class refused to accept teachers appointed by the board and finally the class voted to leave the church and form a separate organization.

If Your Ears Ring With Head Noises.

If you have catarrhal deafness or head noises go to all May's & Liggett's Drug Stores or your druggist and get 1 oz. of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¾ pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little, and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has catarrhal deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Could Write a Book About It

"Nine years ago after my little girl was born dead, I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about four months. The next year I became the mother of a fine 11 pound baby boy. After he was born, I kept on with the medicine to build me up. Four months ago I was nervous and rundown and suffered from other troubles which I knew Lydia E. The annex of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association was the scene of the marriage of Miss Mary Louise Hampton, daughter of William J. Hampton, of Portland street, and John C. Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Peterson, of Wilkinsburg, on Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. S. N. Hutchinson read the service before an improvised altar of cibotium ferns and bamboo, supplemented by candelabra holding lighted cathedral tapers.

Married Saturday

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in light eggshell satin, embroidered with seed pearls at the neckline and hemline. The full court train fell from the waist. Her veil of tulle was draped from a cap of tulle finished with pearls, and her bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Grosvenor Brett Cramp, wore turquoise blue satin, having a brief train and a cape collar. Miss Helen Wilson, maid of honor, wore a similar gown of peach-colored satin, and yellow satin gowns were chosen by the bridesmaids, who included Miss Elizabeth Williams, Mrs. John Gray Miller, Miss Katherine Ness, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mrs. Charles Q. Lesher, of Germantown, Pa. They all carried spring flowers.

Press Club Entertains Count

Count Rene d'Harnoncourt, who is here as lecturer with the Mexican exhibit at Carnegie Institute, was guest of honor at the tea given Saturday by the Women's Press Club in the Womar's City Club. Mrs. William R. McCommon and Miss Ruby Eiseman poured at the attractively arranged tea table, where the centerpiece was of spring flowers and lavendar tapers.

In a delightfully informal talk Count d'Harnoncourt spoke of the three approaches to art—just looking at an object for enjoyment, seeing it for its skill and (third) seeing it in its relation to its creator, which he called appreciation of it as a self-expression.

Mexico is one of the few places where romance is to be found, that is the kind of romance that is without sickly sentimentality, he said, as he proceeded to show how the dramatic and the beautiful are native to the Mexican Indian.

He described in detail and most interestingly an All Saints' Day observance which he said was "a pleasant meeting with the dead."

SHEER FABRICS FAVORED FOR EVENING GARMENTS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The frocks seen at evening functions here are a sheer delight. For sheer and semi-sheer fabrics are the order of the night at this particular stage of the season. Of course one sees plenty of velvets and brocades, but even a casual glance at any smart restaurant, or club will reveal a preponderance of georgette, tulle and chiffon. There fabrics impart such an ethereal grace and air of youth that it is not to be wondered at that women insist on choosing them for their evening frocks designed for the glamorous occasions that make the winter season so delightful. These frocks are very lightly handled in order to keep the fresh charm of the fabric uppermost. Deep berthas, hand embroidery or beading done in a delicate tracery, tiers and soft flounces characterize the models lately seen, and no doubt these same details will be found on frocks dancing through the moonlit southern nights this season.

THE TWO FROCKS sketched here are both of sheer fabrics and both faithfully reflect the current trend. Lucile shows the model, to be seen at the left. It is of turquoise blue tulle over matching georgette with scalloped flounces of the latter on the three-tired skirt. Lines of embroidery forming scallops are worked on each tier and on the bodice. There is a deep V decolletage in back with a huge bow of tulle at its base and a large tulle flower rests on the left shoulder.

ALTHOUGH ONE SEES so many delicately hued frocks of sheer material, no one can gainsay the charm of black chiffon or any other fragile material. And so it is quite easy to believe that the frock shown at the right was one of the successes of the Jack Hylton gala at the Champs Elysees Theater. Of black chiffon, its draped bodice is marked by a deep bertha of the chiffon edged with a flounce.

* * *

FOUR SHALLOW FLOUNCES and two deep ones on the skirt give a soft youthful allure to the lines of this most discreet and, at the same time, smart and feminine model. It is frocks of this type that can be worn several months without losing any of their original smartness.

Kotex is safe

That's why millions of women prefer this modern sanitary pad

BECAUSE Kotex absorbs by a scientific method, it is safer than ordinary sanitary protection. It is soft—not a deceptive softness that soon packs into chafing hardness, but a delicate, lasting softness. That's because it absorbs laterally, giving it a larger area of protection than ordinary pads.

Kotex may be worn on either side, with no possible danger of embarrassment. It is adjustable. You can remove layers of the filler as your needs change. It deodorizes, as you probably know. It gives safe, secure protection. And it is, of course, disposable.

Last year 85% of our great hospitals bought Kotex absorbent in great quantities. What a tribute to its hygienic superiority!

Would You Be Unhappy For Friend's Sake?

Loves Same Girl

"I have a friend. We've been buddies now I should say six years. We've gone everywhere together and we're the best of friends. I would really do anything in the world for him and I'm sure the sentiment is mutual.

"Recently we met two girls and began going with them. In fact, he has been keeping steady company with one of them. He says he is madly in love with the girl and he is insanely jealous. She says she likes him, but he will never say that she is his girl and this causes him to be moody and despondent. Miserable in fact. And the problem that has me up a tree is: I have fallen in love with the girl myself and I think she loves me.

"Whenever I see her she acts like she hates me and if I meet her on the street alone always seems terribly glad to see me and we walk and talk as long as she can.

Wants to Do Right

"Now, I am not one of those I-Love-Me boys. Far from it. I don't belong to that club. But I am sure that this girl really thinks a lot of me from the things she does and says. And I surely think a lot of her. So much that it makes me wretched. But there is Bill. He is my buddy. I don't want to hurt his feelings. I'd feel like a skunk if I stepped in and robbed him of this girl's love. And I don't want to lose him as a friend, either. I think too much of him for that.

"What can I do? How can I

The Only Resort

Of course maybe that idea is all wet. Maybe she's fallen for you just as hard as you've fallen for her. The only way you can find out is to ask her. If she has it's plain that you can't rob Bill of a love he doesn't have. And he'll have to get over his disappointment just as you'll have to get over yours if she doesn't love you. But if it is you she prefers don't go cutting in on Bill while he still thinks she's his girl. Play fair. Make her put it up to him straight as you'd want it put up to you straight. Just how she feels. That'll give a fair deal to you both.

But if she won't do that . . . or if you're wrong about the way she feels about you—get over her, son. Interest yourself in someone else. Be so busy with other people and other interests that you won't have time to think about her. It'll hurt, of course, but you can do it. And some day you'll find love in a big way and still keep your friend.

But put it up to her. She's the Court of Last Resort.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Exchanging Photographs

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When exchanging your graduation pictures with your friends, boys and girls, how should your name be signed. Just "Yours truly, Dick" or "Respectfully yours, Richard" or "Richard Brown"?

2. If a card was to exchange pictures should I consent?

A READER.

1. These form are too businesslike. Of course it isn't necessary to autograph your photograph at all. Many people maintain that it is more personal when not signed, but if you do it might be something like this:

TO DOROTHY

or

BEST WISHES TO DOROTHY.
TOM

or

TO DOROTHY
WITH FRIENDLY GREETINGS
FROM TOM

2. That would be the only courtly thing for you to do, even if you do feel so hard to do it.

But remember that no photograph need be exchanged unless the person to whom we are giving it especially requests that we do this.

Planning a Semi-Formal

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I intend to give a semi-formal dance in the community hall of my home in the near future. The hall accommodates approximately 50 couples comfortably. The problem which confronts me is that I intend inviting 50 people. How may I fill up the space besides having a table with refreshments and a radio?

OLIVE.

1. It is such a joy in these days of crowded social calendars to even hear about a dance hall with wide open spaces that I beg you to channelize capacity into this spacious ness and give your guests the delight of dancing in a room of ample space. They will learn sure bless you for this. Don't clutter the place up, please, with decorations when you can have that rare joy in enjoyment of dancing.

You might, however, have several tables for refreshments and a few chairs for a sitting out dance or for those who prefer to rest and be entertained.

Engagement Rings

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

On which hand is the engagement ring worn? A friend of mine was told by a jeweler that it is worn on the right hand. I always thought that it is worn on the left hand.

A.

Like you, I have never heard of the ring's being worn on the right hand. I think that your friend must have misunderstood in some way and that, anyway, the engagement ring always went on the third finger of the left hand.

Household Hints

Bran may be used effectively in place of soap when laundering chintzes and net alike.

Do not leave your clothes line out at all times. It not only means dirty smudges on your clothes but a most unattractive one. Keep with lines strung across it all the time.

Don't hang pictures all over the house regardless of their value to the rooms in artistic beauty. A picture should have a definite appropriate place or not be hung at all.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, January 20

The active aspirations of today may not be of a rather adverse state of affairs, especially for those in the employment of others, according to some notice of a recent issue from those in authority. There is a general menace of dishonesty and treachery dominating the affairs which may be met by being alert and through efficiency to funds and attend to all matters with discretion.

Those who are engaged in may look for a considerable work if they be employers of others. It may be a disadvantage of importance, or even the sun's apprentice in new project, in the financial activities. Wise alertness and precaution often depend much on one's own faculty and diligence.

A child born on this day should be original and ambitious, but it may lead to safety and craft and would succeed best in the employment of others rather than for itself.

Fay King Declares Her Greatest Dislike Is Affectation and Hypocrisy

By FAY KING

Everyone is an idea to someone, though they may not know it. That is why everyone should do his best to be a worthy example.

Although we only exchanged greetings my ideal was once a gracious young woman who worked in the same office. She never dreamed how hard I tried to be as charming as she was.

It is very painful to find a flaw in friends we have greatly admired.

But time often brings changes, and prosperity sometimes alters personality.

Above all things I dislike affectation and hypocrisy.

When I discover these in friends I prefer not to see them. It is much nicer to remember them as they were in the past than to regret them in the present, for sincerity cannot survive.

Madge Faces Phil Veritzen Alone

The sneer in Dicky's voice as he made his atrocious little speech lost none of its edge because he was smiling as he uttered the words. I was so angry as he finished that I found my fingers working in the primitive instinct to slap and scratch which comes once in a while to the most poised of women even though they never yield to it.

He threw himself back on the bed as he finished, yawned in an elaborate pretense of unconcern and turning on his side closed his eyes. But my hand was on his shoulder again and this time my grasp was not so gentle. Some of the venom which had been in my impulse to slap him went into my gripping fingers.

Listen to me," I whispered. "I care nothing for your opinion of what I am doing, but I do care for the possible criticizing speech of outsiders. I do not know how long Mr. Veritzen is going to stay or what he is going to say, and I will spare you the boredom of listening to him, as I must do. But when he goes, you are going with him to the door."

The glare with which Dicky received the beginning of my speech changed surprisingly to amusement as I finished. I never shall get used to his lightning changes of temperament, and I stared blankly as he grinned up at me.

"That's a new one," he said mockingly. "But I'll double as a chaperon if you so desire. But I'm not going to put in an appearance until he's about ready to go. Listening to that old goat bleat is just one of those things I do anything else but. How are you going to let me know when to saunter in? I'm not going to dress either dressing gown and slippers—that's me."

"You don't need to dress," I told him, trying to get the edge out of my voice, for my anger, unlike Dicky's, had not yet evaporated. He evidently had no notion of the atrocious things he had said, but I could not forget them so easily. However, it was no time for cavilling and I tried hard to appear friendly.

"You know that push button in the floor underneath the table? It sounds in the little room next yours that used to be a maid's room, I imagine. No one in the living room can hear it, but if you stay awake and listen, you can hear it out here. When you do——"

"When I do, I'll mosey in prepared to throw the gentleman out on his ear or stand at attention in a military salute which ever the situation demands. But the Lord help you, woman, after he goes. I'm going to get even with the beating up of a lifetime for waking me up at this hour for a job like this."

"I don't care what you do," I said recklessly, "just so you don't go to sleep again."

"Toss me that book and switch on my lamp," he answered, and when I had obeyed I left the room content, for Dicky, asking for a book is Dicky wide awake.

I hurried back to the living room wondering if my mental processes were as transparent to my employer as they were to my husband. For Dicky unerringly had put his finger upon a hidden desire of mine. I had wished to be the goddess of the machine who should bring about a happy adjustment of Noel's romance with Mary and his relations to his father. It was this prescience of his which had enraged me ever more than his crassness in voicing his opinion. If Mr. Veritzen also suspected this wish of mine, I did not know where I should hide my humiliated head.

But there was appeal nothing else, in the face my employer turned to me as I came back into the living room. He was not seated. Instead, he was pacing up and down the room, whirling at my entrance and coming up to me.

"Dear Lady," he said bending toward me, "where is my—son?"

I had braced myself for the slighting word "cub" which he usually employes when speaking of Noel, a word which I detest. But he evidently was in too serious a mood even for slighting epithet.

"He is in the Underwood apartment," I answered.

"Ah!" I thought so," he said, with a disagreeable little smile, which my intuition told me—boded no good to Harry Underwood. "May I ask how he came there?" He certainly did not arrive on that early train from Sag Harbor, for I met it and came straight here afterward."

"I believe he motored down with some friend of his from out there," I said with an air of casualness which I hoped was convincing. "At any rate he arrived here a couple of hours ago, completely tired out. He tried to go into the Underwood apartment without waking them, but Lillian is a light sleeper and she heard him. He was so very fatigued that she was quite alarmed—he has been ill, you know—and she called her husband and sent for me. But he really was all right, except for nervous exhaustion. Mr. Underwood gave him a sedative and got him into bed. I doubt if he wakens before the late afternoon."

I was almost breathless as I finished this highly embroidered account of Noel's arrival. Would his father believe my story or would he realize where it was faulty?

"But I must see him at once," he cried. "I cannot wait until this afternoon."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Poor Walking Posture a Cause of Flat Feet

Dr. Copeland.

Primitive people who go about barefooted or wear sandals never complain of weak feet. On the other hand, the most common complaint of civilized life is weak feet, or as the trouble is commonly called, "flat feet."

Flat feet are the result of poor development of the muscles of the feet and legs. Some persons are born with weak feet, but poor posture in walking and the wearing of improper shoes are the most important causative factors. Work that necessitates standing continuously on hard floors and pavements are other causes.

Stout people are more likely to have weak and painful feet than thin people. They carry more weight and this places a greater burden on the arches.

The treatment of weak feet consists essentially in the proper development of the muscles of the feet and legs. To this end proper posture in walking and the use of sensible footwear are of great importance.

A flat foot is a weak foot, one in which the muscles have thoroughly relaxed. As a result of this relaxation the normal arch of the foot is no longer maintained. This change from the normal brings on pain in the foot, and frequently this is very severe. The pain may not be confined to the foot, it may be felt up the back of the leg.

People with flat feet cannot stand for any length of time. Walking is an effort and they are only happy when they can be off their feet.

Heredity seems to play a role in this condition. Certainly it is not uncommon for flat feet to involve several members of the same family.

Have you ever examined your children's feet to see whether they have good arches and are not flat-footed? If the feet are not as they should be, and show signs of strain, now is the time for correction. Special care as to exercise of the feet and the proper selection of shoes will do much to prevent future trouble.

In children, as well as in adults, exercise for the feet is simple and beneficial. While sitting on the edge of the bed try to grasp or hold a lead pencil with the toes. Then turn the toes so as to be able to see the sole of the foot. Bend the toes downward toward the floor and back again. Now lie on your back and, with your feet in the air, turn the ankle upward, and bend the toes toward the knee and back again.

These exercises are to be done for ten minutes twice a day. The best times are preferably upon arising in the morning and in the evening when retiring.

Tight shoes cause the muscles of the foot to become weak. It cannot be made too clear that proper shoes are essential for everybody. The shoe should be of simple design, broad in the toes and straight on the inner side. The shoe should fit snugly in the arch and loosely at the toes.

Posture is important in the correction and prevention of flat feet. Slouching leads to turning out of the feet, and this causes strain and friction of the joints. The muscles supporting the movements of the joints are called upon to do more work than they should.

Walk with the head erect, chin and abdomen in, and back straight. In walking always carry the weight of the body on the balls of the feet.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Pure Egyptian henna imparts a red shade to the hair. Henna compounds are coloring agents of varying shades in which henna is used as the base. The compounds are proprietory articles.

Eyelashes are poor weak sisters. Their life span is only a few months, old ones falling, new ones taking their places in the eyes fringes. There are two tonics: vaseline applied every night and pads of absorbent cotton dipped in witch hazel to be used every morning. Clipping the lashes does nothing except to rob them of their delicate curved ends.

There are few cases of obesity caused by some constitutional disorder. The average plump darling is a scale crusher, because she doesn't get enough exercise to burn up her fat cells or because she will not toe the diet mark. Fat meats, butter and cream are the offenders. The average woman needs only three tablespoonfuls of fat a day to supply her diet needs. White bread, cereals and sweets come along as bulk builders. Safe foods are green vegetables, salads, fruits, lean meat, fish.

Watch out for senility warts. They grow quickly, and have ragged white edges. They are not a common affliction. But when they appear it is necessary to have them removed by an expert, since they may develop into malignant growths. Ordinary warts are harmless.

Frequent change of shoes makes for comfort of the feet. New shoes should be fitted late in the day when tramping about has caused the feet to swell slightly. With a tight strap over the instep and the shoe fitted neatly at the heel, there can be ample space provided for the forward portion of the foot. Toes should rest straight, not be thrown into a huddle.

Keep in mind the fact that many foot ills—ingrowing nails, corns, bunions, calloused spots—are due to pressure of the shoe. Change shoes frequently. Be on the lookout for footwear that provides sufficient width and length to prevent pressure or friction. The average dress shoe with narrow toe and spiked heel is a menace. Don't blame the shoe manufacturer. He gives the vimmin what the vimmin vant.

COUNCIL, RELIEF AGENCIES DEADLOCK

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Mr. Pfarr

There is disappointing news for our friend and critic, Elmo Wheel, who asked Bob Wood, the insurance man, to compose the music for the latest Wheel tune, "She Loves Me, She Loves Me Not." Wood has turned down the offer, explaining that he is not horticulturе-conscious, but in his refusal he graciously nominates a substitute, Mr. Chris Lips, his good friend, and author of that stirring ballad, "Down Where the Violets Grow," but it is enough to say that the last line revealed that down where the violets grow was Mingo Junction, O., a hamlet for which Mr. Lips has a warm spot in his heart. Anyhow, that's the kind of tune it is—or was.

We do not believe it would be fair to the people to reprint all the lyrics of Mr. Lips' miniature opera but, to satisfy the curiosity of those who wonder how he managed to rhyme Mingo Junction, we reveal just two lines:

"So I'm speeding west with unction,
To that town called Mingo Junction."

We have uncovered a hidden chapter in the past of Guy Dailey, the desk sergeant at Central Police Station. It is not enough that Sergt. Dailey is a crack shot and an expert at opening locks; he is also a former vaudeville swimmer.

Years ago Dailey did a tank act for the edification of the customers in the provinces. The curtain would lift, Dailey would take a bow and hop nimbly into a tank of water. Then an attendant would hand him a banana and Guy would descend to the depths of the water and eat the banana. This was always good for a big hand, but it would have been bigger had the audience realized that their favorite swimmer did not relish bananas. Five bananas a day over a period of time is, as they say, a lot of bananas, especially under water.

However, the smash of the Dailey routine was the closing punch, billed as "The Death Struggle Between Man and Reptile"—the last named being an alligator.

After the proper announcement, Dailey's attendant ("And Company") would slide the alligator into the tank. And then ensued a fierce struggle which, somehow or other, Dailey always won.

No man ever conquered more alligators, we feel safe in saying, although in the interest of accuracy we must report that the alligator was always chloroformed somewhat just before it was pushed into the tank and that Guy would hop out for his bout just as the alligator was beginning to recover its senses.

Bob Murray, the North Side ward chairman, was among the witnesses of the most entertaining exhibition of absent-mindedness of the season.

It happened in a descending elevator in the City-County Building. As the operator opened the door on the main floor all but one of the passengers—a woman laden with bundles—stepped out. The operator turned to her and repeated, "Main floor."

And she answered, "Bargain basement."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.

To the Editor Sun-Telegraph:

Don't weaken on your Red Cross drive. Washington is still arguing, and both sides are set. Now here is what is liable to happen. The Red Cross will be asked to go right on with their 10 million to raise, then the government will match that with 10. That would give the Republicans an out, and not be called a direct dole that they object to. But their fight has nothing to do with the rest of the country. We want to keep our conscience clear and raise what we have been asked to. For it's a cinch it's got to be done, and they will need all of it. Mr. Lucey, Mr. Hoover's investigator right from there, told me last night that the need was tremendous, especially in Arkansas. Yours, WILL.

Pershing Created Own Staff While Building Army

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING,

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces.

CHAPTER VIII.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

The fact that when we entered the war our government had done little or nothing toward the organization or equipment of an army, not to mention its transportation beyond the sea, was a most tremendous handicap which few of our people realized then, and which is not generally understood as this is written, 13 years later.

As the details of our mission abroad developed it soon became evident that in all that pertained to the maintenance and supply of our armies as distinguished from the purely military task, men with expert knowledge and broad experience in business, industry and transportation would be needed.

In the technical branches of the Army there were many officers with theoretical training in special lines, but with some notable exceptions they generally lacked broad, constructive or administrative experience. From the very start I determined to obtain the best talent available, and was fortunate in practically every field to find able men who were anxious to do their part.

Gen. Pershing

The earliest application of the principle was in connection with timber and lumber procurement. The call for lumber would be enormous, and since it would be impossible with our limited tonnage to bring a great quantity across the Atlantic, most of it would have to be obtained in Europe.

A cable to the War Department early in July recommended the immediate organization of a forestry service consisting of sawmill units to be composed of experienced lumbermen and eight to ten thousand unskilled laborers to build roads and transport lumber. Special request was made for the appointment of Prof. Henry Graves, chief of the United States Forestry Service, who was then on the ground, as the man to take charge of this service.

General Staff Problem

A number of other specially qualified men were requested as we entered the task of building up the supply service, but as this was the first intimation given to the War Department that such a force would be needed, naturally it was some time before it was actually at work.

Coincident with other immediate questions, the development of a satisfactory general staff system to meet the demands of modern warfare required my special attention. The history of our army offered no guide to the organization and duties of the general staff under conditions involving the handling of millions of men in a great war.

When Congress created the General Staff in 1903, it was done upon the recommendation of Mr. Elihu Root, then Secretary of War. After that, for various reasons, considerable hostility grew up against it in both House and Senate. Moreover, there existed no little opposition to it within the Army itself, especially in the entrenched supply departments and bureaus at Washington.

Mr. Root

A certain limited class of line officers who regarded their commissions as sufficient evidence of superior qualifications and as carrying a vested right to live at the expense of the government with a minimum of exertion also decried it. But the main thing that retarded its evolution was

FOOD, FUEL NEEDED BY JOBLESS

A. K. Oliver Charges City's Delay Over Public Works Cause of Crisis Here

While Pittsburgh's unemployed were wondering today where they could obtain food and shelter, the controversy between the city and its welfare organizations continued unabated. Council met today, but took no action to resume city relief following its cessation Saturday.

Welfare agencies here are giving relief to approximately 7,000 families, in addition to the 9,500 families hitherto aided by the city, a survey disclosed today.

Failure to provide jobs by advancing public works has caused the difficulty now facing the city over the problem of unemployment relief, Augustus K. Oliver, president of the Welfare Fund, said today in answer to Councilman John S. Herron, who charged Saturday the fund was not doing its duty in relief work.

RELIEF EXTENDED

Officials and directors say that they are helping more families and expending more money than for many preceding years. Agencies outside of the Welfare Fund agree they could not possibly provide aid for the thousands of unemployed families in addition to their regular work.

Councilman Herron said today:

"The city has at no time contemplated that its relief work should be other than temporary. We are endeavoring to work out a plan to provide jobs for those able to perform manual labor."

Oliver pointed out that the petition of private citizens presented to the Mayor and Council in October asking the city to assume the prime responsibility for relief due to involuntary unemployment, declared such relief measures should be only a part of the plan to meet the emergency. The petition urged upon the Mayor and Council the importance of instituting all possible public works to provide employment. If this plan had been carried out, Oliver declared, the city would not now be faced with refusing further assistance to 10,000 needy families, or granting an additional appropriation for relief.

$25,000 FAR TOO LITTLE

A statement from the Welfare Fund said there has been some suggestion that $25,000 remaining in the city relief appropriation be set up as a nucleus of a fund for providing employment. Lauding the suggestion as commendable, it was declared $25,000 set up as a wage fund would not pay one day's wages to the breadwinners of 10,000 needy families listed by the Department of Welfare, at a wage of $3 per day.

Joseph Dilworth, general chairman of the last Welfare Fund campaign, said:

"In 79 cities with a population of 100,000 and over a total of $4,920,062 was spent for relief during November. Of this sum, $3,785,907, or 76.8 per cent, was provided from public funds. Pittsburgh, with its $200,000 spent in relief, has done less than any other city of its size.

"But citizens interested in the problems of the community and serving as officials of the Welfare Fund feel it would be poor economy for the city to ignore its problem of human welfare caused by the present industrial depression, or to attempt to place upon private agencies unable to carry such a burden, the responsibility of what is primarily a city problem."

Woman, 90, Likes Autos, Would Ride in Plane

In spite of her four score years and ten, Mrs. Mary Ann Blumling enjoys good health on her 90th birthday, at her home, 355 Grove street, McKees Rocks.

Although her eyesight is failing, Mrs. Blumling is active about the house, sewing and cooking. She likes to ride in an automobile. She said:

"The faster the better. I suppose I would even go up in an airplane if I had the chance."

Married at 18, she and her husband, John, tilled and plowed the land now covered by the Pressed Steel Car Company in McKees Rocks.

Munnings Displays Horse Paintings to Public Now Aware of His Merits

A. J. Munnings' first special exhibition will be viewed by a Pittsburgh now aware of his particular merits, as it was not when he made his personal appearance here some years ago.

Odds are in favor of Munnings' paintings of horses at the Gillespie gallery out-distancing in public interest all one-man shows of the season.

Munnings' show at the Gillespie galleries reminds of his work back through the years. One remembers before the war, the canvases, sparkling in color, that celebrated the gypsies and their horses at provincial English fairs. Lovells and Stanleys attired for formal gypsy life were the actors in a series of clear sunlit canvases.

Penelope Redd

During the war, A. J. Munnings attained official prestige as painter to the Canadian army. Again he featured horses, but in serious mood and attended by officers and soldiers in drab khaki.

By the time Munnings himself had arrived in the United States six or seven years ago, he had finished war service and had definitely abandoned gypsies as the subject matter of his paintings. Even then he was already concerned with grave illustrations of the dignified sporting life enjoyed by English society.

While alone here, however, Munnings poked about until he discovered the old Dave McDonald stables on Dithridge street. He visited McDonald every day.

In the city he painted but one equestrian portrait, that of Mrs. William Frew, Jr.

To Munnings, horses and the sports therewith associated are a cult. Using literature as well as painting to express his chief interest in life, he is also famous for recitals of his original poetry on the hunt.

In the current exhibition at the Gillespie galleries, Munnings proves admirably his genuine absorption in equestrian sports including racing, the steeplechase and the hunt.

More than this, his early devotion to Constable's landscapes does him good stead in supplementing his subject matter with excellent backgrounds.

His silvery landscapes are peopled by jockeys, grooms, noble masters of the hunt and royalty on the way to Ascot, all equally dignified. Likewise all united by their interest in superbly bred horses. He portrays a life that is the sporting ideal of America's rapidly developing aristocracy of wealth.

Contrary to precedent, three of Munnings' entries for the Royal Academy are included prior to exhibition in that staid British institution. It is amusing to contemplate Pittsburgh pre-viewing Belgravia. The exhibition, after its close a fortnight hence at the Gillespie gallery, will be shown in the art museum at Buffalo, N. Y.

MYSTERY BLAST WRECKS HOUSE

An investigation was under way today by county detectives and Braddock Township police into cause of an explosion and fire which destroyed the two-story frame dwelling occupied by the family of Harry G. Arcaro, Wilkins avenue, Tassey Hollow.

The Arcaro family, including six children, was absent at the time of the blast. The family spent the night at the home of friends. Braddock Township firemen prevented the fire from spreading to nearby structures. The loss was estimated at $10,000.

Windows in the homes of neighbors were broken by the explosion. Furniture and interior decorations in the Arcaro home were blown into the street. A mail box, torn from its place on the porch, was blown a hundred feet.

A neighbor who was standing at a window facing the Arcaro dwelling when the blast occurred, said:

"I had just gone to the window to pull down the shade. I saw a flash of flame and felt the force of the blast. I ran into the next room grabbed up our twins, called to my wife, and we ran for the door."

TELLER HOLDS CRISIS AID TO WORK

Plans for Fund Drive Announced by Chairman; Will Present Milne Play

The unemployment crisis has proved excellent training for neighborhood settlement work, Sidney A. Teller, director of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, said yesterday. Speaking at the annual meeting of the settlement, he declared that thousands of men and women find themselves with nothing to do except to seek work, attend theaters if financially able, or let themselves drift through sheer inertia into harmful recreations.

Four annual meetings of groups under the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies were held in the afternoon at the settlement. The first was the Hebrew Free Loan Association, one of 17 agencies under the Federation; next that of the settlement itself, and subsequently meetings of the Emma Farm Association, the settlement's summer camp near Zelienople, and the Jewish Big Brother Club, working with adolescent boys.

OPPENHEIMER SPEAKS

Chief speaker at the settlement meeting was Alfred M. Oppenheimer, president of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies who described the plan under way for the first campaign for funds the federation has attempted in five years. S. Leo Ruslander, head of the settlement association, presided.

The settlement observed the end of its thirty-fifth year. Henry J. Kaufmann, donor of the new auditorium finished last year, returned to Pittsburgh to attend the meeting. Edgar J. Kaufmann, chairman of the settlement's building committee, presented his report.

A. Leo Weil was elected an honorary member of the settlement's board of trustees.

Leonard S. Levin, chairman of speakers for the Federation's $450,000 campaign, scheduled to get under way this month, yesterday spoke to 300 women at a meeting of the Pittsburgh Chapter of Hadassah in the Young Men's and Women's Hebrew Association. He described the plight of hundreds of families, children, orphans and aged couples who look for aid to the Jewish "community chest," which was founded in 1912.

At 8 o'clock tonight the annual meeting of the board of Montefiore Hospital will be held in that institution. Three other groups will meet Wednesday evening.

TO PRESENT PLAY

A. A. Milne's "The Perfect Alibi," a three-act mystery play and Broadway success, will be presented by the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players in their Center avenue auditorium tomorrow night.

This is the first presentation of the play in Pittsburgh, and the settlement group is the first amateur organization permitted to play it. Louis Isaac, assisted by Alex Shulman will direct the play. Prominent in the cast are Elihu Glass, Ruth Goldstock, Bill Sloan, Esther Grafman and David C. Silverman.

Before the close of the afternoon I had given the "taste-test" to every rank and file in the town . . . from the cattle herders at the stock-yards to the traders in the pit . . . from the movie fans in the loop to the gang-fighters of the police force.

And as usual, O. G. ran away with the vote.

Let me repeat, I'm not out to prove OLD GOLD'S case. I'm out to get and print the facts . . . as I do on all my "Believe it or nots."

But take it from me . . . or leave it . . . so far, I haven't been able to make OLD GOLD lose.

Gets Capable Officers

Our ... cers as ... College at ... the Army War College, but the majority of the relatively small number of graduates from those schools were scattered throughout the United States and colonial possessions.

During the first two months in France the work imposed upon the few staff officers who had accompanied me was very heavy. After urgent and repeated requests I was fortunate in having at my disposal over in the summer a small group of men which included some of the most brilliant and best educated officers in our army.

In addition to those already with me the officers included in the following note I regarded as especially fitted for the duties for which they were desired.

"Request Robert C. Davis, adjutant general, be sent these headquarters earliest date. Request Frank Moorman of J. O. Manborgne be sent these headquarters earliest date for duty as code expert. Request Samuel T. Hubbard, Jr., signal corps, now here, be called to active service and ordered to report to me. Request 10 of following named officers be sent to report to me by second convoy for general staff duty: Frank R. McCoy, George Van Horn Moseley, Malin Craig, Alfred W. Bjornstadt, H. B. Fiske, Allen J. Grear, Paul B. Malone, Edgar T. Collins, Samuel R. Gleaves, Laurence Halstead, Nicholas W. Campanole, A. E. Moreno, Preston Brown, LeRoy E. Eltinge, W. B. Burtt, Frank T. Hines, Edward L. King, J. P. McAdams, W. C. Sweeney, J. B. Barnes, Kerr T. Riggs, W. H. Winters, Walt C. Johnson, Stuart Heintzelman, Upton Birnie, Kirby Walker, Berkeley Lnochs . . ."

Gen. Davis

Efficiency Attained

Having thus ... and selecting the best features of the French and British staff systems, a general staff organization was created which efficiently met every demand made upon it throughout the war and which remains today as a model for present and future guidance.

Not only did G. H. Q. need an efficient general staff to work out plans and exercise direction in their execution under the commander-in-chief but combat units and the various services also required qualified staff officers. To provide some training without awaiting the establishment of our own schools of instruction the French and British kindly offered to admit our officers to their schools or attach them to their units until we could get our own courses started.

The urgency of sending officers to France for instruction and experience in staff duty was presented to the War Department in July in a cable recommending that 200 graduates of the school of the line or the staff school be sent over, or if such number could not at once be spared that selected officers of the National Guard and reserves be substituted, but the department only partially complied with the request.

My diary at the time notes the following:

Paris, Tuesday, July 17, 1917. Dined on Friday with Thomas Nelson Page, our ambassador to Italy, who praised Italian armies and wants us to send them troops.

Visited Red Cross building and Y. M. C. A. headquarters today with Col. Bradley. Both associations are progressing in organization and extending their activities.

Sent cable urging manufacture of artillery.

Have requested that passports to visit France be refused to officers' families.

Getting Guns Difficult

The suggestion from Ambassador Page that we send a few divisions to aid the Italians indicated that they ...

were about to enter the lists and contend with the other Allies for an allotment of American reinforcements. The ambassador seemed disappointed to find me strongly opposed to the use of troops anywhere except on the Western Front as component parts of our own army.

The question of artillery procurement caused me much concern. The almost negligible amount on hand when we went to war consisted mostly of field guns of the 3-inch type then largely in the hands of troops in the Philippine Islands and elsewhere and unavailable for issue. Moreover, the British, fearful that the Germans might get ... of ... department had adopted nothing which was really up-to-date.

When George Washington was asked which arm of the combat service he would increase if he could have the choice, he replied that it would be the artillery. Since his day its ratio to infantry in all armies has risen enormously. The most striking change in our time developed in the Russo-Japanese War when the proportionate increase especially by the Japanese became greater than ever before, particularly of heavy artillery. Our American observers in Manchuria fully reported to the War Department its importance, but it was idle in those days for any military man to talk of more guns for our Army, and our government made no attempt to keep pace with this tendency in modern armies.

On the other hand, Germany quickly realized the growing significance of artillery and so effectively did she develop this arm that during the first years of the World War the Central Powers had a decided superiority over the Allies.

Use French Weapons

It is hardly believable that the Allies should have failed to appreciate their disadvantage at once, especially in the face of the significant demonstration in Belgium in 1914 yet apparently it was not until there came the prodigious use of artillery against the Russians that they awoke fully to its necessity.

A board of officers, Col. C. C. Williams, Maj. Fox Conner and Capt. J. B. Taylor from my staff, appointed while on the Baltic to study artillery needs, made a preliminary calculation based upon the immediate organization on a war footing of an army of 500,000 men. It was estimated that we should have as an initial requirement 2,524 guns, with a possibility of obtaining only 80 of our 3-inch guns in September and 40 in October from our own foundries, and with no prospect of further deliveries until June, 1918.

The enormous proportion of both light and heavy guns used by both sides, the knowledge of our deficiency and the realization of the length of time that must elapse before we could manufacture and deliver them made it imperative that we seek other sources than our own to help equip our army.

Following up an intimation, it was learned definitely that although not fully supplied themselves the French could increase the output of their factories and would they could put steel from the United States. It seemed probable that we should operate in precedency to their armies, we adopted the French types for the 75-millimeter field piece and caliber and sought their assistance in obtaining the guns. It was agreed in principle, at least for the first two years. We secured an agreement ...

Today's Bluebird

"Bluebirds" were the rumors about this and that circulated in the A. E. F. The Sun-Telegraph will print each day contributions to readers in connection with the publication of Gen. Pershing's memoirs. The best one submitted each day will receive a prize of one dollar.

By B. C. CLARK,
Sergeant, Co. I, 305th M. G. Bn., 80th Division.

After the Armistice, two of our unit in the town of Paeu decided to cash in on rumors concerning sailing orders. They rolled their packs and presented themselves at the door of an elderly Frenchwoman, known as Mme. "Grabitall" because of her profiteering tendencies. They told of their expected departure and she prepared a farewell banquet. A tearful and touching farewell scene ensued. The two doughboys returned to their billets and waited two weeks. The madame would have no further dealings with these two "assassins," as she termed them.

RED CROSS 'ON THE JOB' IN WAR

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS IN THE WAR EARLY: A NURSE TREATING A BRITISH SOLDIER

Red Cross Active

It was most fortunate that we were able to get these guns from the French, as up to the end of the war no guns of American manufacture of the types used except 24 eight-inch mortars and six 14-inch naval guns were fired in battle.

French guns of the 3-inch and 6-inch mortar types, with ammunition, were purchased from the British as they were considered superior to those used by the French.

The Red Cross reported excellent progress at this time, especially in its first efforts to assist the French as agreed upon with Gen. Petain. Its organization by Mr. Grayson M. P. Murphy for war work with our own armies was now about completed. The establishment of canteens and huts at the ports and other important points had already begun and the numbers increased as fast as needed.

These centers of service later maintained dispensaries and provided beds and bathing facilities for men traveling under orders or on leave. When the necessity arose the Red Cross actively cooperated with the Medical Corps in the field, contributing large quantities of supplies and often additional nurses. The work of the society, directed from a central office in Paris, eventually embraced practically every endeavor touching the health of the armies.

Additional Organizations

The Y. M. C. A. with Mr. E. C. Carter in charge, was equally earnest, its principal field of activities being that of recreation and entertainment. Through bureaus of information it also undertook to provide personal services for officers and men both in France and England. It supplied athletic equipment and encouraged sports; conducted clubs and hotels, furnishing reading matter and writing material; cared for the women of the Y. W. C. A. and made a beginning at educational work wherever possible.

Mr. Carter

Later on, at my request, the Y. M. C. A. also undertook to conduct regimental and regional canteens for the army. Although handicapped at all times by lack of tonnage, land transportation and efficient personnel, this enormous task was creditably performed.

These two organizations, the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. eventually covered their particular spheres of activity without material interference one with the other, much to the benefit of all concerned. Supplementary to the work of these societies, the Knights of Columbus came later and grew to be a most helpful agency. Later still the Jewish Welfare and the Salvation Army were added to those who served the soldiers in their billets and at the front and although on a smaller scale they rendered valuable service to our troops.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The broadcaster, it develops, sought to prevent the issuance to the press of Dr. Lee De Forest's blast against excessive advertising ballyhoo on the radio.

It seems to me they might better have expended more effort during the past year to making such a blast unnecessary.

It is difficult at times to understand the reasoning powers of the broadcasters. It is they who formulate the policies by which they select and transmit programs. They stress public interest as determining the availability of every feature put on the air and in order to maintain broadcasting upon what they call "the highest possible standard," and to protect the interests of listeners they retain at all times, they declare, the right to select the programs transmitted.

Yet, all too often they give the appearance of having surrendered the right to the advertising agencies which buy the time.

There are many commercial programs broadcast that are models of presentation. The sponsors of these periods have learned wisely that the aim of all radio advertising is the good will of the listeners and that the amount of good will created is in direct proportion to the subordination of sales plugging in the program. The more elaborate commercial periods are showing an improvement in lessening their ballyhoo, limiting it in many instances to a few seconds at the beginning and end of the broadcast.

It is the half-hour programs, offering a small orchestra and a third-rate vocalist or two, that are the chief offenders in flooding the air with sales propaganda. And the broadcasters seem to do nothing about it except to strike an occasional attitude of deploring. With their revenue now in the millions and advertisers clamoring for time, it seems to me they can afford to be a little more independent, that they can do some first-class squelching of those programs that seek to air their ballyhoo every 10 minutes.

A good program is the best advertisement that a commercial sponsor can obtain on the radio. A good program by its very nature establishes the good will of the armchairs toward its sponsor. The difficulty of many commercial sponsors is in determining whether a program is good, and many of them believe futilely that its merit really depends upon the force of the sales message that is aired. Today, because of excessive ballyhoo in a large number of programs, advertisers are building up the very wall of sales resistance which they are trying to break down.

FINALLY FOUND RIGHT THING FOR COUGH

REM quickly helps Washington boy

JAMES COOK

James Cook of 2236 Nicholson St., S. E., Washington, D. C., gets coughs-and-colds every winter for, like every other lively youngster, he's always outdoors no matter what the weather. At different times his mother tried "almost everything" for these coughs, but without much success. "Then one evening," says Mrs. Cook, "I read in the paper where a Washington child had taken REM for his cough with good results, so I decided to give it to James. It seemed to be the very thing for his cough and relieved him in a short time. Now I always keep REM handy." REM's a great remedy for coughs, as thousands of users, children and grown-ups, testify. Profit by their experience and ask your druggist for REM. Every druggist has it.

REM is quicker. Clings to the throat. Starts relief immediately

LAYTON NOT TO FALL WITHOUT FIGHT.

IN VIEW OF what has happened to other professional cue champions in recent months, it may well be reasoned that the crown of even such an exceptional titleholder as Johnny Layton, world three-cushion king, will be none too secure when he begins the defense of his honors in the annual tournament opening in Chicago tonight. First Welker Cochran snatched the world 18.1 balkline title from Willie Hoppe after the latter had held it for 24 years, and then Ralph Greenleaf had to surrender to Erwin Rudolph the world pocket billiard laurels, which he had won 11 times in 13 years.

Johnny Layton

So Layton will have his work cut out for him to stay at the top of the three-cushion heap, particularly as the field of angle players is more evenly balanced right now than ever before. The game has advanced and the players have improved to such an extent that there are no more set-ups and no more soft spots for even a star who surpassed his field in earlier years by such a wide margin as did Layton.

IT'S A CLASSY string of opponents that Johnny must meet in defense of his scepter, a string made up of Otto Reiselt, Tiff Denton, Allen Hall, Charles Jordan, Arthur Thurnblad, F. S. Scoville and D. J. Jacobs. The only players new to championship tournament play are Scoville and Jacobs, and the class of the former, who hails from Buffalo, was evidenced when he defeated among others in the qualifying rounds Charley Ellis, Pittsburgh's former world champion, and the veteran Alfredo De Oro.

That array of opposition means tough going for Layton, no doubt. Yet Johnny has been such a remarkable standout in his game that cue followers are not going to count him as beaten until it has actually happened. No recent champion in any branch of sport has been more supreme in his field than Layton has been in three-cushion billiards. He has won the title three years in a row and won't be dethroned without a struggle.

SPEAKING OF BILLIARDS, did you ever try to figure out how much walking the players do in a match? It has been estimated that a player who wins a 500-point game of balkline on a 5x10 championship table must walk more than three miles, and that a three-cushion player must walk practically one mile in making 50 points in 70 innings.

The explanation of the greater distance walked per point in three-cushions is that the players are required to do more measuring and sighting and naturally more walking before each shot.

WHILE WAITING FOR another victory by the hockey team which he obligingly took away from Pittsburgh and wished on Philadelphia, Benny Leonard is finding plenty of time to talk boxing. He tells how he cheated Lew Tendler out of a knockout in their Jersey City bout. "He nailed me right on the chin, and he could punch," Benny relates. "My knees sagged, and I said to myself 'Leonard, you're hurt. You've got to think fast. Say something to him.' So I said, 'That was a good punch Lew.' He looked at me in amazement, and with his hand made a motion for me to shut up, but I repeated my remark and this time he said, 'Ah, come on and fight.' Now, when I tell it, it sounds silly, doesn't it? But it was a life-saver then. It did what I wanted it to do. It took Tendler's mind off the fight just long enough for me to steady myself."

Benny Leonard

In explaining why his first thought was to say something to Tendler, Leonard says he always talked in the ring. He must always have something to say, even if it were only to repeat the instructions given by the referee.

"In any team game you have the support of your club mates," Leonard says, "but in fighting you're all alone. Jack Sharkey once said that the loneliest feeling in the world comes over you when your seconds climb out of the ring and you find yourself looking across the patch of canvas to the other fellow in his corner. At such times any words spoken by an opponent will get a boxer's attention. And when he takes his mind off the fight he is under a handicap. That's why I always talked—to make them think about what I was saying instead of about the fight."

WALTER HAGEN says he can't see any reason for all the fuss that is being made about the new golf ball. He declares the difference is so slight that it is ridiculous to say the new ball will have any radical effect upon play. It's simply not worth talking about, he insists.

The banning of the sand wedge is probably a far weightier item in Walter's mind. In ruling the club illegal, the U. S. G. A. hit Hagen and Horton Smith hard in their respective pocketbooks. Smith was to have received $1 royalty for each club sold, the price having been fixed at $12, and the contract for making the wedges had been given to Hagen's firm.

THE FIRST MAN to scout the story that the possbility of Muddy Ruels having managerial ambitions might lead to a troublesome situation on the Boston American League club was the individual who would be chiefly affected by such a development—Shauno Collins, the new Red Sox pilot. Collins wants it understood that it was at his own suggestion that Ruel was purchased from Washington, that he has no fear of any undermining, and that he has asked President Bob Quinn to give up the idea of trading Ruel without a trial, a plan whereby Quinn aimed to assure peace and harmony on the Boston club.

DID THE CELEBRATED Carnegie Foundation report defeat its own purpose? Replying to the questionnaire on whether the report helped intercollegiate athletics, Curly Byrd, University of Maryland football coach, said that on the contrary it had increased recruiting.

But that isn't all. This increased recruiting of athletes, Byrd and others believe, resulted from nothing else but that in exposing the various methods the report taught tricks which many did not know.

Harold Haid

BACK IN 1922 the Cincinnati club threw Pitcher Jack Scott on the baseball scrap pile in the belief that his hurling arm was hopelessly gone. John McGraw picked him up, placed him in the hands of a muscle and nerve specialist, and made him again a winning flinger.

There is now a possibility that Bill McKechnie may have similar success with Harold Haid, Altoona citizen, with whom the Cardinal management parted last fall when it looked as if a lame arm had ended his career.

M'KECHNIE WAS WILLING to take a chance that the elbow trouble, which Haid says resulted from overwork, might be only temporary, and present indications are that he will profit by the gamble. For Haid, who was sent to Beverly Hills, Cal., to be treated by Dr. Charles H. Spencer, reports that his ailing wing has improved rapidly under the treatments, and that he feels he will be able to pitch for the Braves this coming season. "And believe me," he writes, "I surely want to get cured and to be able to work for Bill McKechnie in Boston just as I did in St. Louis. He has been a real friend to me, and I want to pay him back for the favors he has done for me."

Fifth place and possibly a half-interest in fourth position in the International League standing will be at stake when the Yellow Jacket icemen renew their warfare with the Detroit Olympics at Duquesne Garden tomorrow night.

The Schooley skaters tied the Detroiters for fifth place by holding the league-leading Buffalo Bisons to a 1-1 tie at Fort Erie, Ont., Saturday night, and then clung to their position by handing the Stars a 4-2 setback at Syracuse last night. In downing the Stars the Jackets made no mistake, for the Olympics were taking the measure of Windsor's runners-up, 2-1, while the locals were doing their stuff in Syracuse.

IMPORTANT BATTLE

Tomorrow night's game shapes up as just about as "crucial" a fray as can be staged with the season only a little past the halfway mark. The Jackets today are one game out of fourth place, two games out of third place and three games out of second place in the race. Should Pittsburgh down Detroit and London beat Cleveland tomorrow, the Jackets will tie the Indians for the fourth notch in the standings.

In view of the fact that Pittsburgh and Detroit now are tied, the Olympics can reap the same benefits by winning here. The club that loses will fall well back in the chase.

Fist fights and extremely rough play have marked the last two Pittsburgh-Detroit battles. With so much at stake and so much ill feeling prevailing, Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the local club, fears that the officials may not be able to keep tomorrow night's game in hand and he has arranged for extra police protection that order may be maintained.

PROSPEROUS TRIP

When the Jackets returned home today to make ready for the fray they concluded their most successful road trip of the season. Detroit was humbled, 5-0; Buffalo was tied, 1-1, and Syracuse was downed, 4-2, during the excursion. The total goals shows a Pittsburgh advantage of 10 to 3, and the enemies' total of three goals indicated that Goalie Albie Cox lost none of his cunning while out with a broken hand. Cox returned to the nets in the joust in Detroit.

Fandom's great interest in the Detroit invasion is reflected in the exceptionally heavy advance ticket sale. There is little doubt but

Big Bill Tilden Attends Net Play Here

Among those present at the closing matches of the Pittsburgh Golf Club indoor tennis tourney yesterday was none other than William T. Tilden, II, fresh from Youngstown, where he has been arranging, it is said, for an appearance in connection with his proposed tour as a professional. Tilden did not take active part in the P. G. C. milling, but he was an interested spectator as Lott and Hennessey accounted for Van Ryn and Hall in the thrilling five-set men's doubles final.

Later Big Bill paired with Berkeley Bell, of Texas, to engage Dave Gilmore, Allegheny Country Club southpaw star, and Howard Burgwin of the home club in a speedy four-handed squash racquets contest. No scores were reported, but it was obvious that the lean Philadelphian is by no means as proficient at squash racquets as he is at tennis.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF LAST SATURDAY: EDWARD PAYSON WESTON WALKED 1,978 MILES—Edward Payson Weston wagered that he could walk 2,000 miles in 856 hours of actual walking time. Starting at the Royal Exchange in London, on January 18, 1879, he actually walked 1,978 miles within the allotted time, his itinerary covering 31 counties. He lost his bet, but nevertheless this feat is hailed as one of the most remarkable in the whole annals of pedestrianism. He had failed to take into account the dreadful condition of the English turnpike roads and was compelled to plod through snow, rain and mud all during his famous walk. DIAMOND ROCK IS LISTED AS A BATTLESHIP—Diamond Rock, which rises from the ocean off the southwest corner of Martinique to a sheer height of 660 feet, is registered in English Admiralty books as His Majesty's battleship "Diamond Rock." This curious listing of the rock is the English government's tribute to the gallantry of Lieut. James W. Maurice, who, with 120 men, defended the rock against a French fleet in the war of 1803.

Tommy Loughran and Jack Gross have been matched for the main bout at the Arena in Philadelphia next Monday night.

Jack Nelson and Mike Sullivan, heavyweights, box at Egg Harbor, N. J., Thursday night, and the Hayes brothers, Frankie and Johnny, meet Young Firpo and Jimmy Rhodes, respectively, at the Broadway Club in Philadelphia the same night.

Young Patsy Wallace and Charley Nelson meet in Atlantic City next Monday night.

M.-A. LEAGUE DEFERS ACTION

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Jan. 19.—Petitions were presented in behalf of Charleston, W. Va., and Huntington, W. Va., at a meeting of the Middle-Atlantic Baseball League here yesterday seeking membership. President E. M. Dailey said action on the petitions would be deferred until another meeting about two weeks hence. Formal applications next must be presented.

The way was cleared for admitting the two clubs, by changing the league constitution to permit formation of a 10-club circuit.

The petitions were presented by John D. Stuart, manager of the Huntington team. Both teams now are members of the Tri-State League which does not play daily games.

Stuart expressed belief that entrance of the two cities would add stability to the league, whose West Virginia members already include Fairmont, Wheeling and Clarksburg. Johnstown, Charleroi, Jeannette and Scottdale are the Pennsylvania members and the eighth club is that of Cumberland, Md.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Sunday afternoon at Morgan, Pa. The Morgan soccer team is playing the Shamrocks, of Cleveland, in the first round of the National Challenge Cup competition. The game has been shifted overnight from the Bridgeville Speedway because of Blue Law opposition from some mysterious source and the Shamrocks are playing under protest because the field is not enclosed, in accordance with the rules of the cup play.

A crowd of upwards of 5,000 persons lines the playing space and the hillsides . . . Most of them are from Morgan and the adjoining mining towns and they know their soccer . . . They appreciate the fine points of the play and "ride" the referee, a capable man, and the other officials the same as the followers of other sports hop on their arbiters.

The day is ideal, but the thawing ground leaves much to be desired . . . It is a sea of churned mud, with here and there puddles of oozing slime . . . After only a few minutes of play, the redoubtable Buff Donnelli, the best all-round soccer player in these parts, shoots home the first goal. Then another and yet another, until at half time the score is 3 to 0 in favor of the white-jerseyed home team, which monopolizes the play, giving the visitors no chance to get on their game . . . The aggressive, typically American style of never-ceasing attack sweeps the more scientific and stylish pattern of the Clevelanders relentlessly before it.

Between halves, the youngsters seep under the ropes that line the field to gather around Donnelli, their hero, the star of the old Heidelberg National amateur champions, who now is branded a professional because he coaches the freshman football team at Duquesne University, where he starred in football and twice captained the eleven . . . Someone wisecracks that this would have been a good, close game if Buff had remained at home, but he modestly replies that if he were not in the lineup someone else would be booting those goals . . . "When they come to you, you just have to shoot them in," he says . . . But there is only one Buff Donnelli.

The second half . . . Buff scores again to complete the rout of the Clevelanders, and then his teammates come through with three more goals. Buff makes another and there is yet another, and Morgan is in the second round with a 9-0 victory. . . . Everybody is happy, except the visitors, who never had a chance with that man Donnelli going in his best form to erase the impression that he had slipped somewhat in his soccer playing. . . . The crowd goes away satisfied, with a good afternoon's sport to talk about and a day's recreation away from the worries of the toil and strife for existence.

One has to go to one of these games to appreciate just what a Sunday afternoon's soccer fun means to the people of the small towns who patronize the sport. . . . Many of them come from the "old country," somewhere in the British Isles, where soccer is to them what baseball is to the American-born youth. . . . There is no reason why they should be shunted from pillar to post, as was the case in the dark days of "prize-fighting," before the authorities came to look upon this sport and its principals with tolerance and understanding and paved the way for the legalized boxing industry we have in well-conducted clubs today. . . . Forcing Morgan to shift from the Bridgeville Speedway to the open Morgan field worked an untold hardship on the club. . . . For one thing, it had to play through to victory under protest, and even yet,

DAVIES, TOBIAS BOX IN BOWL

With Motor Square Garden given over to the automobile show tonight, the only boxing card on the Western Pennsylvania slate is billed at New Castle where the Castle Bowl, formerly the Jolly Bowl, reopens its doors with a benefit show headed by Willie Davies, of Charleroi, and Phil Tobias, fast-moving flyweight and bantamweight rivals, both of whom have pleased the fans there in the past. Many tickets have been sold for the affair, the proceeds of which will be turned over to Mayor William Gillespie's relief committee.

Phil Tobias

Promoters Apples Meyers and Jim McGirr are working on their preliminary cards for their shows later in the week. Meyers has Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, the district's leading middleweight paired with Billy Brent, Negro, of the Hill, and formerly of Chicago, in his 10-round main bout at the Moose Temple downtown, Friday night, while McGirr also is stepping out offering Billy Jones, Negro light-heavyweight star, formerly of Pittsburgh, now of Philadelphia, against Harold Scarney, of Youngstown, in his windup at McKeesport on Thursday. He signed Henry Attel, of Girard, O., today to box Buddy McArthurs, of McKeesport, in his semi-final.

Motor Square Garden's next show is slated for Tuesday night of next week, when Johnny Datto, Filipino featherweight, of Cleveland, conqueror of Jackie Rodgers, will meet Harry Fierro, of Chicago, in the 10-round main event.

Y. M. H. A. VICTOR

CUMBERLAND, Md., Jan. 19.—The Y. M. H. A. quintet, of Pittsburgh, scored a 22-19 victory over the local Cumberland Kaceys here yesterday afternoon.

GAMES TONIGHT.

Allegheny vs. Waynesburg. Waynesburg, California Teachers at St. Vincent's. Bucknell at N. Y. Crescent A. C.

By JESS CARVER.

Like the old collar on the brew, Bethany and Westminster have bobbed to the top of the tri-state college basketball heap, and confronted by what may be termed a made-to-order program for the week may be expected to remain thereabouts at least for the coming seven-day period.

A week ago, Allegheny's 'Gators were ruling the roost, not alone, but boasting a mathematical advantage over its nearest rivals. The Bisons and United Presbyterians captured a pair of contests each during the week, however, while Allegheny, faltering badly, took a header and wound up by losing a pair.

SEVEN UNDEFEATED

There remained seven teams in the undefeated class in the district. Paced by the Buffalo Creekers and the United Presbyterians, Pitt, Carnegie Tech, Duquesne, Fairmont Teachers and Davis-Elkins have unsullied records for tri-state competition.

Thanks very much to a pair of wins over Geneva, Thiel has kept its grasp on the leadership of the Conference. Westminster is pressing the Lutherans close, and probably will knock 'em off this week. Geneva has one victory and two setbacks and Waynesburg two defeats.

The Bisons and Titans have swellish opportunities under their snoots to make their positions well nigh impregnable this week. Bethany has Allegheny and Geneva to meet on its own bandbox court, while Westminster plays but once, invading Greenville Saturday night for tussle with Thiel.

ANENT STALLING

Rumblings of the storm raised by the cash customers at the Pitt-West Virginia game Saturday night still may be heard. The situation as it concerns West Virginia and Pitt is tough on both coaches. West Virginia has size and strength on its side; Pitt, speed. One can't blame Carlson for not sending his team into the set zone defense employed by the Mountaineers and at the same time, the gentlemanly Francis Stadsvold would have been foolish to send his team out to attempt to match speed with the clever Panthers.

It is stalling, o. k., and I'm afraid the blame must go on the Mountaineers for stalling is defined as a lack of aggressive action on the part of the team with the fewer points. Pitt established an early lead when the West Virginians did mix it with 'em, and so it hardly was expected that they'd risk being buffeted about by the bigger Mountaineers by forcing the issue deep in Mountaineer territory after that.

However, a pole-sitting contest would be hectic along side of the act put on by the rivals in that first half.

HOGAN SATISFIED

Buzz Hogan, mentor at Carnegie, was well satisfied with the way his team took Wash-Jeff. The game was a rough and rugged one, for the Presidents usually employ all the muscle possible. Tech, however, according to Hogan, experienced little difficulty in taking the Prexies.

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Willie Davies vs. Phil Tobias, 10 rounds, and Nick Adams vs. Joe Midway and Lefty Arnold vs. Elmer Badger, 6 rounds each, and Walter West vs. Johnny Banko and Billy Mide vs. Roy Minteer, 4 rounds each (unemployed benefit show), Castle Bowl, New Castle, Pa.

MISS RICE, HICKS WIN AS NET PLAY ENDS

Golden Steady in Capturing Agua Caliente Playoff From Von Elm

LOTT, VAN RYN, HENNESSEY IN STAR ROLES

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

In a blaze of spectacular racquet pyrotechnics the curtain descended last evening on the first annual mid-winter invitation tennis tournament of the Pittsburgh Golf Club on the splendid P. G. C. covered court battery. With stars of national and international magnitude scintillating meteorically in final men's, women's and mixed doubles displays, an enthusiastic capacity gallery lingered long past the dinner hour as Virginia Rice, dazzling Boston lass, and Paul Hicks, brilliant Princeton and Edgewood ace, brought competition to sparkling climax with 6-8, 6-4, 15-13 triumph over Mrs. Herman Stump, consistent Baltimorean, and George M. Lott Jr., Davis Cup flash of Chicago, in a stirring wind-up battle.

LOTT, HENNESSY COP

Prior to the mixed doubles finale Lott had joined forces with Smiling Johnny Hennessey, of Indianapolis, to carve out an impressive two-man victory at the expense of the Jersey pair, John Van Ryn and J. Gilbert Hall, 8-6, 4-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, and still earlier the indefatigable Miss Rice, with her equally loyal partner, Mianne Palfrey, had dropped a heart-breaking extra-bracket women's dual finisher to Mrs. J. Dallas Corbiere and Mrs. William Endicott in a 9-7, 1-6, 6-3 all-Bostonian affair.

The out-of-season net event proved a striking success not only from the standpoint of artistic workmanship, but likewise from the even more important angle of keenly-fought tussling.

The achievement of Miss Rice and Hicks in annexing the mixed doubles crown was most signal, for in three of the four matches in which they engaged they were compelled to struggle upward after dropping the initial set.

MRS. STUMP FALTERS

A break in Hicks' service occasioned largely by two of his few double faults last night gave Mrs. Stump and Lott the first set at 8-6, but Mrs. Stump suffered similar reversals to aid in deadlocking the fray as the Boston-Pittsburgh combine snatched frame two, Mrs. Stump and Lott stepped off to a 2-0 lead in stanza three as Hicks netted a difficult volley and an overhead to blow delivery after Lott had bagged game one. But again Mrs. Stump's light service was dented in the third game and as Hicks made good in the fourth, the going was deuced at 2-2.

Games thereafter followed service strictly until 11-all, when for the third time Mrs. Stump was broken through. But at this juncture Miss Rice underwent her first lapse of the match, a double fault, making it 12-12 after several spirited exchanges. Lott and Hicks streaked through their games in speedy fashion for 13-13, but in the twenty-seventh Mrs. Stump once more faltered to lose and this time Miss Rice was not to be denied and ran out game, set and contest.

VAN RYN OUTSTANDING

Lott and Van Ryn were the outstanding figures of the men's doubles, with Hennessey close behind them. Hall weakened in the concluding stages, his overhead and backhand setting him down in the fifth set when sorely he needed them.

Lott dropped service at the start of the debate and the hostile duo held the upper hand until the eighth game, when Van Ryn was turned back for 4-all. Delivery then prevailed to 7-6, when Hall was crushed for the set. Two Hennessy breaks cost the Westerners session two, though Van Ryn, in the eighth game was likewise bumped. Hennessy lapsed again in the third game of set three and the Jerseyites seemed heading for the barn, but reverses of Hall in games six and 10 spilled the dope and the set. Lott was broken in the fifth game to decide the fate of set four. In set five, delivery was good till Lott and Hennessy led at 3-2.

In game six, however, the mid-West twain punched through two scoring volleys to put game point up on Hall's service, whereupon Van Ryn backhanded a tough volley out of court on the right and thereafter the problem for Smiling John and George was merely one of holding delivery. Lott was forced to pull up from love-40 to land the ultimate game. Hennessy rammed home the farewell marker.

MRS. CORBIERE STARS

Mrs. Corbiere was the governing factor in the women's doubles final. A glaring—and uncalled—net fault by Mrs. Endicott, who over-anxiously, but none the less illegally, reached over the barrier to block off a most vital point against the Misses Palfrey and Rice in the third seance may have had considerable bearing on the outcome.

Semi-final matches in all divisions were reeled off throughout the morning. In the men's doubles, Eddie Jacobs, Pitt southpaw crack, and Berkley Bell, Texas satellite, had a set on Van Ryn and Hall, but couldn't keep the pace and fell, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3, while Hennessy and Lott trimmed the former Western Pennsylvania champions, Dr. Billy McElroy and Collie Burgwin, 6-3, 6-1, in a free-hitting melee. The penultimate mixed doubles feature found Jacobs and Mrs. DeLloyd Thompson, Washington, Pa., contender, nosed out by Mrs. Stump and Lott in a sizzling encounter, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN, The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER VII.

On came the mighty wave of humanity, sweeping over the frozen fastness of the Alaskan country.

The slim young marshal of Henrietta came floundering in with all the other human flotsam tossed up on the bleak Bering Sea shores.

Rex Beach

While he still was the marshal of Henrietta, a letter from an old cowpuncher had arrived, telling of the glorious opportunities of the cold gold land.

If the letter had come from any source but a cattleman, the chances are Tex Rickard wouldn't have started so soon. He would have gone eventually. There never was a halter on Tex. He moved when and how he pleased.

That soiled letter from the gold diggings acted like a catapult on Rickard. He was fairly flung into Alaska by the impulse to be in the stampede.

Early in the spring of 1895 Rickard staggered down the gangplank of the steamer that had touched at Juneau. There was a pack on his back and his small, dark eyes blazed with the eagerness of the youthful adventurer.

Out of Juneau streaked the Chilkoot Pass, soon to become the great highway of sorrow, disappointment, hunger, disease, murder, death! But beyond that trail, the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow — the Yukon country, waiting with open arms of virgin gold.

MEETS REX BEACH

Dog teams. Priceless. Lucky devils they who had had the good judgment to bring such teams in. Unhappy the man who set out on that trail on shank's mare. Rickard had no other steed. Small wonder, though, that he had not ridden down the gangplank on an Indian pony.

He was his own dog team. Strapping his few possessions on a sled that he had purchased, he started out over the Chilkoot. He crossed the path of a whale of a big boy one day. Instinctively they were drawn toward each other and there on the great trail began a friendship that lasted until the day of Rickard's death.

There in the wild lands, Tex and Rex Beach met. Something in the cut and swing of the young fellow from Texas attracted Beach.

He asked him where he was from and Tex told him all about tossing in that marshal's badge that he might be in the rush for gold.

RICKARD'S FIRST FORTUNE

Winter with its icy breath and cruel talons found Rickard in Circle City. No luck. Rickard had pressed on into deepest Alaska. Broke, sick, hungry and doubting his own grim courage, he struggled on. Then came the Bonanza strike. It was maddening. It seemed that every time men sank into the depths of despond someone would strike it lucky and the rush would take on added impetus. It became an army of reckless daredevils who would get their fill of gold or die in the sheer attempt. The chamois bag that Rickard had brought in began to fill out. Tex was getting the gold at last. Claims were staked out in wild confusion, but the silent Texan went about the task of establishing his right to a bit of land in his usual keen way.

He prospered and when a company invaded the district for the purpose of snapping up the different claims Rickard placed a price of $60,000 on his and got it. It was Rickard's first big strike in life and he was in high glee.

"I'm going home to Texas," he told his buddies, "I've got mine, and, besides, I want to be warm, by golly, I never seen anything like this cold."

THE GREAT NORTHERN

Tex went out in style. He got him one of those Rolls Royce outfits of the country, a dog team. You were up in the chips when you had one of those rigs.

Gradually, Rickard, his money strapped around his waist in a leather pouch belt, worked his way back toward partial civilization.

On the trail, he met up with Tom Turner, later to become Rickard's partner. Turner had an exciting tale to tell of Dawson City, new in the history of the gold settlements.

Turner spoke of the lack of entertainment for miners. There was no place for them to gamble, for instance, and the history of gold rushes was that there must be gambling places. Boys would be boys, and load up a prospector with nuggets and he must have some outlet. He must keep up with games of chance.

Tex and Turner joined out as partners. They got hold of some lumber and up went the first gambling palace of the region.

They called it the Great Northern and it became famous in story and song. Through its doors clattered the mob, dirty, down-and-outers, up-in-the-chips braggarts, old and young, the halt and the blind. The gamblers, born and bred, the happy-go-lucky, the newly-rich, the poor, all came in a strange queue of humanity.

TEX IS WIPED OUT

Business roared on like a millrace. Gambling was high and lofty, but one night it hit the ceiling.

A group of young buckoes, loaded for bear and top-heavy with gold dust, boomed into the Great Northern.

"We're gamblin' fools," they told Rickard. "Can a lot of high flyers get any action here?" they asked.

"Go as far as you like. The skylight is the limit," drawled Tex.

And they hit it. They couldn't do anything wrong. Tex stood by and saw his fortune dwindle like a candle in a furnace. In a few hours' time he was cleaned out. He put up the Great Northern and that went. Then the lot on which it stood. Broke again. Rickard grinned as he walked out, leaving a riot in his wake.

Gene Tunney Decides to Be Explorer

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The New York American says today that Gene Tunney is to explore over the trail of Marco Polo, leaving New York next Thursday for a three years' expedition. Mrs. Tunney will accompany him as far as Cairo. Dr. John Oliver La Gorce, vice president of the National Geographic Society, and other scientists will be in the expedition, which will have eight automobiles for a party of 35. Syria, Arabia, Irak and Thibet will be among the places explored.

Collins, Hauser Batting Leaders

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(INS.)—Jimmy Collins, Rochester first baseman now with the St. Louis Cardinals, won the 1930 batting championship of the International League with a mark of .376, according to official records released today. Collins made the greatest number of hits, 234; most triples, 19, and set a new league record by batting in 180 runs.

Joe Hauser, Baltimore, established a world record by hitting 63 home runs and set three league marks by scoring 173 runs, hitting for 443 total bases and striking out 117 times.

VICTOR SCORES 75 TO COP BY FOUR STROKES

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—John Golden yesterday won the Agua Caliente open championship, defeating George Von Elm, former amateur champion, by four strokes in an 18-hole playoff. Golden scored a 75, three strokes over par, while Von Elm fell back to 79, with an erratic 41 on the second nine holes.

After finishing the 72-hole championship proper in a deadlock at 293 Saturday, the stocky Golden and Von Elm set out in a 30-mile wind to decide who should own outright a diamond studded medal, emblematic of the crown.

Wirt G. Bowman, president of the Agua Caliente Company, presented Golden a check for $10,000 with another check for $3,500 to Von Elm. Later they will cash the checks and divide the accruing $13,500 into equal parts of $6,750. The cards:

"You Will Benefit Public Health"

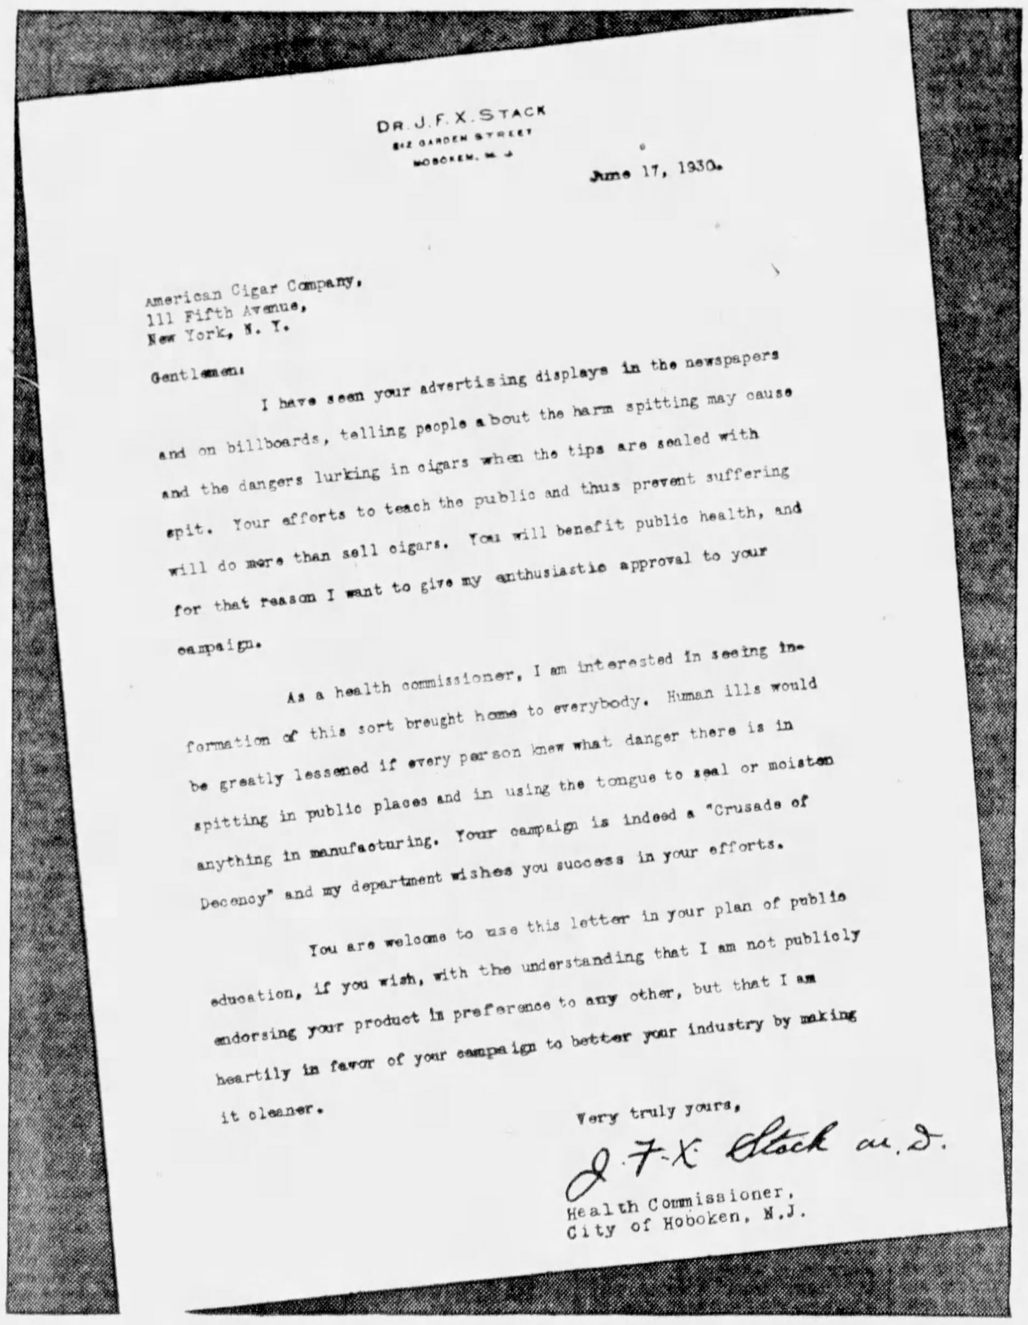
DR. J. F. X. STACK

Health Commissioner, City of Hoboken, N. J.



DR. J. F. X. STACK
622 GARDEN STREET
HOBOKEN, N. J.

June 17, 1930.

American Cigar Company,
111 Fifth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I have seen your advertising displays in the newspapers and on billboards, telling people about the harm spitting may cause and the dangers lurking in cigars when the tips are sealed with spit. Your efforts to teach the public and thus prevent suffering will do more than sell cigars. You will benefit public health, and for that reason I want to give my enthusiastic approval to your campaign.

As a health commissioner, I am interested in seeing information of this sort brought home to everybody. Human ills would be greatly lessened if every person knew what danger there is in spitting in public places and in using the tongue to seal or moisten anything in manufacturing. Your campaign is indeed a "Crusade of Decency" and my department wishes you success in your efforts.

You are welcome to use this letter in your plan of public education, if you wish, with the understanding that I am not publicly endorsing your product in preference to any other, but that I am heartily in favor of your campaign to better your industry by making it cleaner.

Very truly yours,
J. F. X. Stack M. D.
Health Commissioner,
City of Hoboken, N.J.

. . . one of 56 health officials from 56 different points approving Cremo's crusade against spit or spit-tipping.

Every smoker, every wife whose husband smokes cigars, should read Dr. Stack's letter.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. Stack writes: "I am heartily in favor of your campaign to better your industry by making it cleaner."

The war against spit is a crusade of decency. Join it... Smoke Certified Cremo — a really wonderful smoke — mild — mellow — nut-sweet! Every leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

In this period of cold weather and cracked lips, above all insist on a cigar—free of the spit germ.

Buff Donnelli, rated as the greatest shot in American soccerdom found his shooting boots for the first time this season yesterday, with the result that Morgan F. C., representing Western Pennsylvania, easily defeated the Cleveland Shamrocks, 9 goals to 0, in the first round of the National Challenge cup at Morgan Field.

Under a blue sky and powerful sun, a crowd estimated at 5,000 watched the white-clad Morgan team outclass, outrame, and outplay the poorest team ever to come here from Ohio.

It was pathetic to watch the blue and white eleven trying to stop Buff Donnelli, Fred Donnelli and Charley Powell. Buff Donnelli, with his educated toe, crashed the ball past Campbell five times without the Ohio man even touching the ball.

MORGAN STARTS FAST

Campbell tried hard to stop the rout, but Toman and Gallagher, the visiting fullbacks, did not seem to know what it was all about and while the Shamrock defense could do nothing to stop the Donnelli family, the efforts of the front line, led by Schodt, were worse. Schodt came from Denmark with a big reputation as a goal-getter, but he just tagged along with Dante Villani all afternoon.

Morgan started with its usual hustle, and the Clevelanders were on the defensive. After Morgan had missed goals through the mud stopping the ball, Buff Donnelli went on a rampage, and, before the interval, flashed the ball into the net three times.

Prior to the start of the game, the Shamrock captain formally protested the contest being played at Morgan, but, after watching the terrible exhibition which disgusted the fans, the protest should be thrown in the waste paper basket.

The second half found the Clevelanders getting close to Burnaby three times. Forcing a corner off Cyle was the last effort to score. Then Morgan started operations. Buff Donnelli scored twice, Fred Donnelli added two more, Chappell found the net, and Mangus, shooting from 20 yards, smashed the ball past Campbell.

VISITORS OUTCLASSED

The Shamrocks did not try to play in the second half, and the visiting fullback, giving Morgan all the credit, stated after the game that the Shamrocks could not have beaten the Donnelli team on a dry field.

Cleveland came down trying to play short passing combination soccer that has never been successful against American-born teams of this district.

Buff Donnelli and Fred Donnelli played ducks and drakes with the Shamrock defense, but Chappell and Barrafoldi were weak. Dave Matthews was the only Morgan halfback to flash any form, but Villani and Cyle were delightful to watch. Burnaby had little to do.

Just how the National Challenge cup committee will entertain the protest is a matter of conjecture. Morgan can be classed as an enclosed field, only two gates provide admission, but the game can be seen from the outside.

It was the most orderly crowd of the season, and it would be a bad break for the locals if a replay should be ordered. The local commissioner should be able to clarify the situation. The lineup:

Morgan—9		Cleve. Sham.—0
Durnaby	G	Campbell
Villani	R B	Toman
Cyle	L B	Gallagher
Matthews	R H	Kyle
Mangus	C H	Sherman
Yamuck	L H	McNab
Chappell	O R	McCauley
Donnelli	I R	Corrigan
Donnelli	C	Schodt
Powell	I L	McCourt
Barrafoldi	O L	Cooney

Goals: Buff Donnelli 5, Fred Donnelli 2, Chappell, Mangus. Score at half time: Morgan 3; Shamrocks, 0. Substitute: Corrigan for Cooney. Referee, Lumsden. Linesmen, O'Connor and Corns.

DUNLEVY COPS

Dunlevy swamped Bridgeville, 4-1, in the Keystone League, and Gratztown tied Mather, 2-2, and Gallatin whipped Clarksville, 5-1, in the Mon-Yough League yesterday.

Independent contests saw Piney Fork and Moon Run deadlock, 1-1; Union Switch trip Crafton Heights, 3-0; Glendale topple the Germans, 4-0, and Curry bump Pittsburgh Youth, 4-2.

ARTHUR R. ROBERTS, M.Sc., ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR

September 11th, 1930

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The results given in the table below are based on a series of tests made on a six cylinder Marmon engine in the Mechanical Engineering Laboratory of McGill University, Montreal.

Five samples of gasoline were submitted for test. Each had a distinguishing letter only and could not be identified by us while the tests were being carried out.

Gasoline D, later identified as Blue Sunoco Motor Fuel, gave the lowest consumption for "brake horse power hour" over a wide range of speed.

As Blue Sunoco Motor Fuel sells at 3¢ a gallon cheaper than 3 of the other gasolines submitted, it is undoubtedly the most economical of the fuels tested both with regards to cost and miles per gallon of gasoline.

The table shows a comparison of the results obtained using Blue Sunoco Motor Fuel as the standard of comparison:

Gals. Gasoline used to obtain same H.P. Hours as "D"	Brand of Gasoline	Cost per Gallon	Cost of fuel consumed to obtain same H.P. Hours. (Compared with "D")
	("D") Blue Sunoco
100	"C"	29¢	$29.00
101.5	"A"	32¢	32.50
102	"E"	32¢	32.60
103.6	"B"	32¢	33.10
103.8		29¢	30.10

Respectfully submitted,
Chas. M. McKergow

The Canadian gallon is one-fifth larger than the U. S. gallon, plus a 2½ c duty. Hence the higher price for Canadian gasoline.

The BEST and most convincing TEST of all . . . is to compare BLUE SUNOCO'S PERFORMANCE in your car . . . particularly with those motor fuels costing 3c more per gallon.

For best results use SUNOCO, the wholly distilled MOTOR OIL with Blue Sunoco Motor Fuel

BLUE SUNOCO will not make gum deposits in any motor . . . neither will any other good gasoline

HUGE BANKING GROUPS GET HARD TEST

Princeton Economist Favors Small Units; Urges Charter Control to Halt Crashes

Stocks Drift Off

STOCK PRICES EASE, RALLY THEN SAG

Some Shares Break Their 1930 Lows; Market Almost At Standstill; Sales Slim

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP.)—The financial markets began a new week reluctantly today, thoroughly under the blue Monday influence.

Share prices drifted moderately lower, with a few prominent issues breaking their 1930 minimum levels but bear prodding failed to bring out important liquidation, and the market seemed to have been sold almost to a standstill. Trading was in extremely slim volume. The bond division was likewise apathetic, although prices there showed a fairly good undertone.

The share list eased 1 to 3 points during the morning, stiffened for a time around midday, and again eased off in the early afternoon.

The share market was again under the influence of uncertainty over the disclosures of the annual earnings statements about to appear, with such important dividend readjustments as may be indicated. The comparative stability of indices of business activity from November to December, now that the figures are available, has led to the sanguine hope that the depression has reached bottom, but the financial community is evidently anxious to take a more accurate measure of the shrinkage in corporate profits before beginning to discount the prospects of recovery.

The bond market is being watched more carefully than stocks for signs of improvement. While the better grade new bonds offered publicly last week found a ready market, it is understood that dealers are still left holding a substantial amount of the new issues.

There is further talk of still another reduction in the New York rediscount rate, as a means of forcing hesitant funds into long term investment.

The week-end business and trade reports in the main failed to shed new light on the situation, but most encouraging perhaps were the reports from some centers of active wholesale buying for spring trade. The low prices for merchandise are meeting gratifying response in many cities. The Bureau of Labor statistics announced today that its index of wholesale prices dropped 2½ per cent in December, bringing the purchasing power of the 1926 dollar up $1.27 3-5.

The Standard Statistics index of industrial production for last month was announced as only 1 point below November. In November it dropped 3.7 points, and 6 points in October, so that the curve seems clearly to be flattening out.

Bank of America Elects Directors

Germany's Foreign Trade Fell in 1930

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—Trade figures listed total German imports in 1930 at 10,393,000,000 marks and exports at 12,035,000,000 marks, compared with 13,446,000,000 and 13,482,000,000 marks in 1929. A mark is worth just less than 24 cents.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 19. — Grains went downward early today, influenced by moist weather in domestic winter wheat territory and by fresh declines in wheat quotations at Liverpool. An increase of 2,584,000 bushels in the amount of wheat on ocean passage was announced, with Argentina and Australia reported as anxious sellers abroad. Opening ⅛ to ⅞ cents off, wheat afterward dipped further. Corn started ¼ to ⅝ cents down, and continued to sag.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Raw sugar was quiet again early today, and the only business reported was 24,000 bags of Porto Rican consolidated late last week at 3.38c for late January clearance. There were more offerings at this level, but buyers showed no further interest.

Only moderate withdrawals of refined were reported, with new business light even in second hand quarters, where sugars were obtainable at below the list price of 4.70c as quoted by all refiners.

By JULIUS LEVIN.

The Jeannette Felders defeated in their first 1931 starts as members of the Allegheny County League, will strive for their first victory tonight when they entertain the Fintex passers, winners of the championship in the initial round of play.

The Felders, while playing independent ball, managed to defeat the strongest club in the district, han the passfest one to draw two of the highest teams in the league to their first two opponents and as a result took first place on the charter, one point ahead of the Merchants and the Duquesne Lafayettes, two of the contenders for the second half championship each took a fall out of the Jeannette passers.

The Felders, however, feel confident they can make the County League grade and hope to win their winning streak at the expense of Wy Pars and his first-half champions.

The Knickers fresh from their victory over the Schenleys will be out for another scalp tonight when they clash with the South Side Falcons on the Falcon floor. The Knickers were the first to defeat the Schenleys this season, stopping them after the North Siders had come on 10 successive triumphs. The preliminary to this contest will provide a real "natural," featuring the Red Men Mahans and Y. M. H. A. Varsity B quintet. The Y boys out to turn the tables on the South Siders for the defeat suffered at their hands earlier in the season. The Seven back is the only one marring the "Y" record.

The Irene Kaufmann Settlement House passers, first half champions of the Wagner Institutional League, invade Trinity Cathedral for a league crusher. Trinity handed the Settlement passers their only defeat in the first round of play and revenge will be the objective of Ziggy Kahn's boys.

through no fault of its own, may have to replay the game.

For another it was deprived of revenue that would have come through the gates to help defray the expenses of its less important games throughout the season. . . . A collection was taken up on the Morgan field, but it had to be stretched to pay the expenses of the visiting club and the other operating overhead. . . . One could tell that from the worried expression of Manager Mangus.

Soccer is a good healthful scientific game enough, and when properly entertaining sport. It has stepped aside here against all manner of handicaps for years and produced championship teams and outstanding players in the national field. . . . What it needs is a bit of encouragement, a helpful slap on the back rather than more obstacles. . . . If you doubt the good that it does, even on Sunday afternoons, just go out to one of the games and look at the happy eager faces as I did yesterday, along with Tom Birks, the Sun-Telegraph's soccer expert, and D. E. Benjamin, sports photographer, and you too will become a booster of the hooters who at heart are the most amateur of amateurs and get their greatest kick out of playing the game for the game's sake.—HARRY KECK.

JACKETS COP, 4-2

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Unleashing a last-minute offensive, the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets earned a 4-2 victory over Syracuse here last night.

Tory Gregg led the Jackets in a third-period rally. After five minutes, he went down to give Proudlock a pretty pass for a score. Eleven minutes later he emerged from a melee in the mouth of coal, nursing the puck in the crook of his blade, to send it over Farrell's shoulder for the final score.

In the first two periods Pittsburgh had trouble staving off the Stars, but managed to score on shots by Reese and White in the second frame.

Fraser went to the box for tripping, but it has since the Stars found out how to get by Cox.

In the second frame Holmes fought his way down alone to net the first point of the contest. Shortly after, Stack drilled the Star defense for a point of position to put one by Farrell.

Palatinus put the Stars ahead again on a similar play, but the Jackets evened the score on a counter by White.

Five minutes after the whistle Proudlock fought his way out of a melee to put the puck past Farrell and entrench his team in the lead, 3 to 2. The final . . .

Trading Appeal Given Fixed Trusts

By GEORGE B. SNYDER.

A NEW TYPE OF FIXED investment trust has been developed to permit individuals to take advantage of wide diversification in making speculative commitments in stocks. The popularity of the fixed trust and the spreading belief that the end of the bull market is not far distant have been responsible for the offering of shares in trusts of this type by leading investment houses.

The appeal of the new type of trust is purely speculative but it appears to have desirable features for individuals who believe that stocks are bargains at present prices and that they will increase in value within a few years. Diversification offers the same advantages to the speculator wishing to take a profit from changes in the stock market over the next two years as it does to the regular investor. Satisfactory diversification is a difficult thing for the individual of limited resources to attain. The new type of fixed trust attempts to supply this diversification.

Differ from Old Trusts

MOST OF THE NEW fixed trusts are planned for an existence of from two to four years on the assumption that a turn in the market will take place before the expiration of that time. The selection of stocks is usually slightly different from that of the ordinary fixed trust since possibilities for rapid enhancement in value have been given greater weight than investment return.

Similar results could be obtained for a speculator buying shares in one of the older type of fixed trusts if the shares would be converted into cash after the next bull market has been in existence for a sufficient period. The new type of investment trusts may offer some advantages from a speculative viewpoint as a result of the different selection of securities. In general the investment trusts formed to exist for long periods and to appeal to investors have specialized in the selection of blue chip stocks. Some of the stocks of this class are included in the speculative trusts but other factors have led also to the selection of stocks which would not be desirable in a long term trust but which would be likely to participate substantially in a bull market.

Two Trusts Offered

TWO OF THE recently offered short term fixed trusts are Allied Business Corporation Shares, Series E, and Two Year Trust Shares. The former has holdings of 35 common stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange. At current prices ABC Trust Shares, Series E, yield an annual return of approximately 5.75 per cent from current cash and regular stock dividends. Regular and semi-annual distributions will be made June 30 and December 31 of each year. The term of this trust is for three years ending December 31, 1933. It may be extended for not exceeding four three-month periods at the option of the firm depositing the stock with the trustee.

Two Year Trust Shares terminate Janary 15, 1933. The portfolio includes 33 common stocks which are selling at an average of about 33 per cent of their 1929-1930 highs. In selecting the stocks emphasis has been placed on securities which have experienced drastic declines and which represent companies whose earnings would respond quickly to improving business conditions. The purchase of these stocks as a group should minimize the risk inherent in buying any one of the securities.

Similar to Other Trusts

THE NEW TYPE OF short term speculative fixed trust is similar to the better known long term fixed trust in most of its provisions with only a few exceptions. The termination is only a few years away. There is frequently a provision limiting the size of the trust. The average of stocks selected is not in as high grade a class. The appeal is to the speculator who wishes to profit from the next bull market instead of to the investor buying shares for income.

STOCK EXCHANGE TOPICS

Gold Problem Further Complicated by Drop In Sterling Today.

The gold problem was further complicated today by the easing off of sterling to $4.85 5-16, or the approximate gold import point. This occurred shortly after the opening of the foreign exchange market in New York today, causing considerable surprise in banking circles. Unless something is done to bolster sterling the flow of gold to this country from England stopped some time ago, will be resumed. London has been wrestling with the problem of checking the drain of her gold to France, and now English bankers are confronted with this new problem. Shipments of gold from London to Paris last week were on a very heavy scale. London bankers, however, over the week-end expressed the hope that the end of the gold drain was in sight. It is believed in Wall Street that a resumption of gold shipments to New York would hasten whatever plans central bank heads have been discussing for the solving of the gold problem.

Bear markets turn very slowly and stocks remain cheap longer than do excessively dear. The statistics of this business depression make it one of the worst ever experienced. A relentless movement movement that is testing the mettle of every industry and every corporation. The worst may have been seen in point of depression, but the low area may be very wide. Leading captains of industry have not changed their opinion that any real revival will not begin until fall, says "The Trader" in Barron's Weekly.

The stock market is inclined to take little credence to the subdued statements of business and industrial leaders and to most apparent tangible and visible evidences of business recovery before launching itself upon a bull movement of any considerable proportions. There has been no rush of bargain hunters to the market, such as generally is to be seen at the bottom of a bear move. Conservative interests in Wall street take the position that even if stocks are now scraping bottom, the investor will do well to await definite evidences of an upturn in business, and particularly in activity of the enterprises in which he contemplates investments before making his commitments. That is doubtless the reason why rallies in the stock market do not "carry through" sufficiently far to permit profit taking by the professionals. The spring rally is apparently some distance away.

Accompanying the report of the United Founders Corporation, which was mailed to stockholders today, is a copy of an address to officers by E. G. Seagrave, president, in which he said, respecting business and security market conditions:

"If we could forget the past and look only to conditions in the United States as they exist at this moment — intensified technique, a perfected industrial organization and equipment, a people ready and trained to work, ample and cheap credit, and business leaders awaiting only the first sign that liquidation is complete to begin renewed progress—the pessimism of recent months would vanish in the face of a certainty of business recovery. Opinions may differ as to when the recovery will set in, but if history can be used as a criterion, the upturn should occur in the year 1931. The soundest reason for expecting it is that we have already had more than a full year of adjustment to alter conditions. Practically every element of economic strength, which, in the past, has contributed to speedy economic recovery, is present today."

The ability of a large number of diversified issues to hold well about their 1930 lows, indicates to one brokerage house that these particular stocks are pointed higher and should do better than the average when the market takes a definite turn. The various groups represented in this compilation, and the most attractive stock in each according to this source are as follows: Rails, Atchison, Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central and new Haven; public utilities, American Telephone and Telegraph, Electric Power and Light, North American, Public Service of New Jersey; coppers, American Smelting, Anaconda, Kennecott; amusements, Paramount-Public; motor, Electric Auto-Lite, General Motors; tobacco, American Tobacco, Liggett & Myers B; miscellaneous, Coca Cola, Foster-Wheeler, Lambert, Procter & Gamble, Woolworth.

Stocks of crude rubber in the United States as of December 31 were the largest in history and may explain to some extent the recent action of rubber manufacturing interests in reducing tire prices. Crude rubber inventories in all parts of the country aggregated 203,221 tons, or almost double stocks of 105,137 tons on December 31, 1929.

Mrs. Calvert Suspects Duke Of Stealing Necklace

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson. Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later Duke is about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He claims he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites him to stay. Duke doubts Jim's story.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Whatever it was Duke Garson had to say to her—it was perilously close to a declaration of love—was too difficult for easy expression. When he stopped in the midst of it, Connie was glad; she was not, now, ready to hear it; her mood of receptivity had passed and she was determined to hear no more. There would be other days, other nights—

"I'm tired," she said, rising. "Do you mind if I go to bed?"

He was instantly apologetic, with a swift comprehension that their opportune moments had been exhausted.

"Forgive me!" he said quickly. "Of course you're tired."

"But you can sit up as long as you like," she told him, hospitably. "Go to bed when you are ready. If you are hungry there's the icebox—or can I get you something?"

"No, nothing," he told her. "I think I'll sit out here for another cigaret before I turn in myself."

Connie Retires

In bed, with a soft breeze blowing across her light cover, Connie was lulled gently towards sleep despite the persistent thoughts that clamored in her mind for attention.

It was comfortable to lie there slowly drifting into slumber, with her entire being saturated with a softly excited feeling of satisfaction. Her mind was upon Duke Garson, and to think of him brought a deep, mysterious comfort. As she thought of him, it was not in a physical way—no desire of the touch of his magnetic hands or the crushing sensation of his embrace. She had momentarily, in swift gusts, experienced such yearning during the day, but now all of that was instinct, and replaced by a quiet assurance of well being. Nothing in her life, no man, had ever affected her quite like this. Compared to Duke Garson, the others had been curiously without potency. Jim Tracy had affected her life not at all. Some time, possibly, Duke Garson might accomplish wherein Jim Tracy had failed; but even this now, was not a thought—it was a thin fragment, half a dream like the wisp of a cloud floating across the moon. Gradually she had sunk into sleep.

In the morning before, naturally, she came awake, Connie out of her dreamlessness, sensed another person in her room. A sound, perhaps, roused her—yet so drowsy she was that her eyes did not open.

"Connie! Wake up!"

Her eyes opened, and standing beside the bed was her mother, a startled look in her eyes.

Connie sat up sharply, her senses in confusion.

"What it is, mother?"

Pearls Stolen

"My pearls! They're gone! They've been taken out of the left-hand drawer of my dressing table where I kept them locked. The key was in the center tray as usual, and the drawer was locked, but the pearls aren't there. Someone must have slipped into my room in the night."

All sleep drained out of Connie's brain and she was instantly alert; her mother, she observed, was fully dressed.

"But, mother, that's impossible! Wouldn't you have heard anyone coming into your room?"

"Not if they were quiet. The door was unlocked and, besides, I was out on my sleeping porch. I slept heavily last night and with the wind blowing in the trees I could easily have missed any stealthy sound in the bedroom. I don't know what made me look for the pearls this morning, unless it was because I thought I noticed the disarrangement of some things on the table—my hair brush or something seemed a little out of place. Some little thing aroused my suspicion—it might have been anything. I unlocked the drawer and they weren't there."

Connie thrust her feet into mules and slipped into a dressing gown. "Perhaps you misplaced them yourself. You are awfully careless sometimes, and—"

"Not about my pearls, Connie. I've always kept them in the same place for 10 years. No, I've been robbed. I've looked everywhere to make sure, and there's no doubt."

"Thank heaven, you had them insured against robbery."

"For ten thousand dollars—only a fraction of their value."

Many Suspects

Through Connie's mind flashed, disturbingly, the warning given by Duke Garson. Higgins, the butler, had coveted the string of pearls—Garson had vouched that he wouldn't steal them—but had urged that they be put in a safe. To her mind, too, came Jim Tracy's story of the holdup. Unless Garson had been mistaken—if Jim had really told the truth—there had been dangerous characters in the neighborhood last night. The whole affair stunned her. Robbers so daring might not have hesitated at murder, had her mother been awakened. This danger was past, but her sense of safety was vividly insecure, a chilling menace hung in the air. Too, the money value of the pearls was a heavy loss, but that could be borne easier than this sudden invasion of the house by cruel, stealthy thievery.

"I don't like to suspect anyone, Connie, but this man Garson—what do we really know about him?" her mother asked. "Didn't you intimate to me, the first time you mentioned him, that he had some connection with desperate people?"

"Don't worry about Duke Garson," Connie said quickly. "We might as well suspect Kitty—they both came from the same neighborhood. It might have been someone from the outside."

But even as she said this she was thinking of Higgins and his confessed desire to steal the necklace. Now, it appeared he had accomplished his hope. Perhaps the maid had helped him. Her mother was not aware of Higgins' scheme or Garson's warning. For the present Connie decided not to tell her.

"You and I, mother, haven't the faintest idea what to do about it," she said. "Before we say or do a thing, we'll put the whole matter before Duke Garson. He'll know exactly what's what."

DAILY TRUE STORY — There and Back

"How much, Andrew?"

"Four hundred thousand."

Mrs. Hadley stared at her husband, who sat in the old morris chair, placidly smoking his pet pipe. She had been out to the Caldertown Book Club and had just returned.

"Of course I wouldn't believe that, Andrew," she said, finally.

"All right, only it happens to be true."

"But it can't be true," she exclaimed. "It just can't be true that you have been paid $400,000 for that mechanical thing patent, because you sit there just as calm as you did yesterday when you didn't have $400 to your name."

"And the house. I own the house, you know."

"But, Andrew, really——"

"I've just got in from New York. Closed the deal there at noon in Meiton's office. He's a smart lawyer. I'd have taken half of that but he got the four hundred and they pay his fees. I deposited it."

Mr. Hadley fished in his pocket and produced the deposit book.

Bertha Hadley snatched it from her husband's fingers and stared at the figures.

"Four—hundred—thousand—dollars!" she cried, slowly. Then she kissed her husband.

"A man needs kisses more when he is struggling and broke and discouraged," Mr. Hadley said, mildly.

"Why—I—I—I tried to encourage you," she stammered, knowing well enough that she had done nothing of the sort, "and think of it, we're rich now——"

Allie and Ferd came in at this moment, Allie from her stenographer's job at the City Market and Ferd from the machine shop, for, like his father, he was mechanically inclined.

"Your father has sold that patent, my dears," Mrs. Hadley cried. "Can you imagine—for $400,000!"

"Paper matches or coupons?" Ferd asked.

"Dad!" Allie cried.

Mrs. Hadley exhibited the deposit book.

It was all very exciting.

"Now I can have a mink coat," Mrs. Hadley said.

Family Pleased

"And a squirrel coat for me," Allie added.

"Boy me for one of those long, low roadsters that do 90 up hill!" Ferd cried, doing a few dance steps.

"I think," Mr. Hadley said, getting up and looking at his carpet slippers with the sides ripped out, "that I shall invest about $3 in genuine leather slippers!"

"You can afford a million pair, now," his wife exclaimed.

"No, only a hundred and ninety-nine thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine pairs, with a dollar left over," Allie corrected her.

It was the gayest family dinner they had had for a long while.

"What shall we do now?" Mrs. Hadley asked.

"Eat and sleep," her husband suggested.

"I mean, what are you going to do, open an office or something?"

"I'm going to work on another idea, a mechanical thing I've wanted to experiment with. And I wouldn't go shouting around about this money."

Tom White came over and took Allie out to the movies. He didn't quite understand what the moment when she remarked that she was going to have dresses just like those the star wore.

Ferd went skating with Tilly Parker and mentioned that in a few days he'd be taking her out in a block-long roadster.

Ferd got his car. Mrs. Hadley and Allie got their fur coats. Mr. Hadley got his slippers, also some new and stylish clothes his wife made him buy.

Mrs. Lawton, Mrs. Hadley's sister, came out to Caldertown to see her. Mrs. Lawton pitied her sister because she lived out in the suburbs in a house that wasn't worth more than fifteen thousand and because her children worked and her husband slaved in a greasy little machine shop of his own.

Move to New York

On this visit Mrs. Lawton saw the new clothes and the cat and said that she was glad Mr. Hadley was prospering a little better.

He had never cared greatly for his wife's would-be aristocratic sister.

"My dear, what a fool you are to live out here like this. You could take a lovely apartment on the avenue, you could mingle with aristocracy, enjoy teas and receptions, and there would be the gay theater life and night clubs for the children—it would give you a chance to see life as it should be lived and give your children the opportunity to meet nice people and to marry well," Mrs. Lawton gushed.

She said a great deal more. Allie and Ferd listened. And after Mrs. Lawton had gone Mrs. Hadley and Allie and Ferd held a council of war.

It was all set. They were going to demand the social strata, an apartment on the avenue and servants and modish clothes and cars and chauffeurs—the whole works, as Ferd put it.

Tom White was deeply distressed when he learned that Allie Hadley was going to live in New York. Allie tried to be nice to him, but, as she told her mother, Tom was after all just a young country lawyer.

And Tilly Parker had some tearful quarter hours all by herself when Ferd Hadley seemed to lose his affectionate interest in her. She just knew that some no-good gold-digging peroxide blonde in the city would make a fool of him.

However, the Hadleys moved into the city. Hadley said he would dispose of the old furniture and house.

Hadley got up a bit early one morning a few months later. He could hardly get his breakfast eaten and went to his office in a hurry. The morning Ferd came in Ferd was a mess. He was all rumpled, he was missing a part of a drum from his left eye, and he was so broke, the Jap to whom he owed collars to pay the washing bill.

One Sunday afternoon Allie started off. She was going to some "benefit" theatrical and was going with a party to the Post Road. Mrs. Hadley was going to Compton's Valley to hear a famous Red lecture.

"Not today," Hadley said. "Allie, we'll have a benefit in here. Ferd, the road house will have to do without your presence and my money. Bertha, I don't think parlor Bolshevism is good for you. I've got something to say."

They started to protest angrily.

"If you must go—go ahead. I won't be here when you get back. What are you going to use for money?" Hadley asked.

That held them.

"Well, we were happy in Caldertown, very happy. But you folks wanted to get there—socially. You got there. Now we are going back, that's the answer—there and back."

"But we'll never go back. We're going to the mountains and to Bar Harbor next week," his wife told him.

"Again I ask, what are you going to use for money?"

Return to Caldertown

"Don't be forever flouting your money—you're worth almost half a million," she reminded him.

"I have less than a thousand dollars in the bank. When I pay the rent here and the servants and we get back to the old house in Caldertown, I won't have a hundred left in the bank. I'm going back. Of course, if you can find some way to keep on living like this, the generosity of your society friends——"

It was an exciting scene, but the next day the Hadleys went back to Caldertown.

Allie found that Tom White was a real fellow, after all, worth a thousand of the saps she had been meeting.

Ferd discovered that Tillie was as sincere as she was pretty, and wondered what he had ever seen in those city girls.

Mrs. Hadley entertained her old friends with distinction.

And Mr. Hadley never did tell them that while it was true that he didn't have a thousand left in the bank, he did have plenty of gilt-edged securities paying him handsome dividends.

"Many people get there," Hadley says, "but not many are fortunate enough to get there—and back!"

The difficulty is deciding who shall decide what everybody thinks about a public enemy suspect.

Traffic Officers' School

Systematic Instruction for Police Who Regulate Vehicle Movements Cannot Fail to Be Helpful

The announcement of Frank L. Duggan, chairman of the Better Traffic Committee, that Pittsburgh is to have a traffic officers' school is to be welcomed.

The plan is for five officers to be sent to the New York traffic school for training. On completion of the course they will serve as instructors in the Pittsburgh school. Thanks are due the unnamed member of the committee who is providing the funds for their training.

To be thoroughly efficient traffic officers should be familiar with state and city automobile regulations; they should be well informed in regard to the various matters, such as street and highway directions, on which they are likely to be questioned by motorists passing through the city; they should be cool and quick-witted in emergencies, and they should know how to command respect without resorting to harsh language.

Guiding traffic is a duty so different from other police activities that the time probably will come when traffic officers will constitute a distinct force. Traffic regulation promises to become more complicated, at least during the next few years. Eventually it may be simplified. In the meanwhile it is important to have men on the job who thoroughly understand it.

New Safety Records

Philadelphia Company Subsidiaries May Well Be Proud of Their Success In Avoiding Accidents

The overworked adjective "wonderful," applied so often nowadays to rather commonplace things, may be fittingly used in describing the success attained by the subsidiaries of the Philadelphia Company last year in preventing accidents.

It is truly marvelous that a concern like the Duquesne Light Company, with its thousands of employes and its high power electric lines, should have operated during 1930 without a single fatality. During almost one-third of the year it did not even have a lost time accident.

Scarcely less impressive are the fine records of the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the Equitable Gas Company.

One appreciates the performance of these public utilities the more when one compares their accomplishments with those of similar concerns in other cities. In respect to accident prevention the Pittsburgh companies are so far ahead of their competitors that it can hardly be considered a race. The Philadelphia Company has brought to Pittsburgh a surprisingly large number of medals awarded for safe operation.

Let public utilities elsewhere take notice of the local concerns' accomplishment, and improve their own records. They can do it if they try hard enough. Excellent though it now is, the Philadelphia Company's performance will also no doubt be bettered.

13 Years of Service

Pittsburgh Owes the Urban League a Debt of Gratitude for Its Work to Improve Status of Negroes.

Since the beginning of the World War Pittsburgh's industries have been deprived of the supply of European labor on which they formerly depended. The void has been filled in part by bringing in Negroes from the South. Pittsburgh's Negro population has nearly doubled in that period, now numbering 60,000.

The problems presented by the arrival in the city of thousands of Negroes unfamiliar with city ways would have been much more difficult of solution if the National League on Urban Conditions Among Negroes had not opened a branch here in 1918 to help solve them.

The Urban League of Pittsburgh, which developed from that move, will round out 13 years of service at its annual meeting Wednesday. It has been very fine service. The League, in addition to handling individual cases, conducts industrial, civic and visiting teacher departments, and trains social workers on fellowships in the University of Pittsburgh.

It initiated the movement which led to the establishment last month of a boys' club in the Hill District to cope with juvenile delinquency. It laid the groundwork for the survey, financed by the Buhl Foundation, of the social conditions of the Negro in the Hill District.

Pittsburgh owes the Urban League a debt of gratitude.

State Farm Show

Great Agricultural Exposition Opening In Harrisburg Today Is Worth a Visit.

The Pennsylvania Farm Show opening in Harrisburg today—the fifteenth of these annual agricultural expositions conducted by the Commonwealth—is notable for the new building in which the exhibits are housed. It cost the state about $1,500,000, covers 10 acres, and has made possible the addition of eight new departments to the show—horses, sheep, swine, dairy cattle, beef cattle, flowers, dramatics and horseshoe pitching.

The wide range of the things in which rural Pennsylvania is interested is indicated by the new departments. They also furnish an idea of the variety of the things to be seen at the show.

The show is well worth a visit.

Blaming the Cat

England and Other Countries Do It.

THE GUILTY FELINE.

This picture, according to Lord Birkenhead's London newspaper, the Daily Express, shows the political situation in England.

Trade and industry have temporarily gone to smash—see the broken crockery in the foreground.

On the left, old Mother Britannia, looking at the wreckage, asks, "Who did it?" The guilty one is indicated by outstretched arms and pointing fingers. THE CAT DID IT. And the cat is "world depression." You must not blame us, say the great ones. We never broke anything in our lives. All this wreckage is due to the cat.

But Great Britain has no monopoly of the "blame-the-cat" policy. It's an international weakness.

Here in America our public men also find it convenient to blame the cat—"world depression."

When things go well and prosperity reigns, the "great man" is responsible. He admits modestly that HE DID IT.

But when conditions change and prosperity walks out of sight around the corner, then the convenient cat "world depression" is called to act as scapegoat and bear the load.

You are told about "periodical recurrence of depression." China and India are blamed for not buying goods.

This particular little picture, aimed at the Labor government in Britain, blaming its failure on the "cat," applies with equal accuracy to all governments, everywhere.

Mrs. Solomon Says—

A Litany of this Year of Grace Nineteen-thirty-one:

From all pessimists, alarmists and those who desire to hang crepe upon our rosy hopes. Good Lord, deliver us!

From all Pollyannas, who would jolly us with false prophecies and empty promises, saying "TOMORROW is the millennium, when stocks will 'come back,' styles will be more becoming and something will be done about Prohibition," oh, rescue us! For they are as infants that chatter of Santa Claus.

From the "I told-you-so's" of all those who did not hang up their ermine coats in Wall Street and can still meet their payments on the radio, oh, spare us! For they give us a headache.

From borrowers and grafters and those who know 20 ways of making a million, yet cannot pay the dinner-check, excuse us. For the world is full of "Andy Browns."

* * *

From all those who tempt us with poison-potions in colored glasses, saying "Just ONE won't hurt you," for it is pre-war.

From jazz singers and all-day radio-tuners.

From popular songs with only one rhyme and no melody.

From all rackets, big and little, and from all racketeers, professional and amateur.

From get-rich-quick promoters and "easy-money" talkers.

From Paris style-designers who seek to persuade us to new styles that were passe when we were born.

* * *

From long hair, bare legs, fashions nude stockings spiked-heeled backless gowns, long evening gloves and all the instruments of torture wherewith we have afflicted ourselves.—Good Lord, deliver us!

* * *

For verily, verily we that were foolish are now wise to ourselves, and we that made Big WHOOPEE have paid the saxophone-player. Let us cast aside our follies, forget our HEADACHE and rejoice that we are once more sane, if a little sadder!

Chemistry, the Dynamic Science

By Archibald Henderson

The extraordinary development of chemistry, within the past century and more, is almost without a parallel in the history of science. America has been a leader in chemistry, both in teaching and research. It has spent enormous sums for laboratories, equipment and facilities of every sort. Go back 135 years, and we find that chemistry was one of the subjects in the curriculum at the College of New Jersey.

It was not many years before this example was followed by other leading American institutions of higher learning. But it was long before chemistry acquired any marked importance in the scheme of studies, or was realized as an important factor in industry.

A feeling that chemistry was an exhibition subject, rather than a true science, persisted for a long time. Teachers of chemistry devoted almost all their time to making demonstrations of various sorts of known chemical reactions, rather than trying to discover new facts in chemistry.

Many people had an uneasy and quite unworthy suspicion that chemistry was a child of doubtful parentage, deriving from alchemy, which was associated with the highly doubtful project of the transmutation of metals, in particular the changing of the baser metals into gold, or the effort to discover some universal solvent, the philosopher's tone or the elixir of life itself.

Half a century ago, universities were very chary of money for investment into spacious laboratories and expensive equipment. Today it is not unusual for universities of importance to build laboratories ranging in cost from a quarter of a million to a million dollars.

In the 29 universities belonging to the Association of American Universities there were registered in one or more courses of chemistry during the past year more than 25,000 students. During the five-year period, 1924-1929, the number of graduate students engaged in research in various branches of chemistry increased by more than 50 per cent.

Fairly accurate estimates indicate that, in the more than 1,000 colleges and professional schools in this country, there are at least 50,000 people engaged in the study of chemistry.

A great stimulus to the study of chemistry has been the immense industrial development of recent years. Many industrial plants have their own laboratories, which must be manned by trained chemists. The great war called vivid attention to the enormous part which chemistry plays in modern life, both in peace and war times. Consider the problem of motor fuel alone. Within a generation, the colossal automotive industry has been developed.

As Prof. William McPherson recently pointed out, in 1896 there were only four gasoline auto cars in this country, one being in a museum and the other incapable of locomotion. Today there are 25,000,000; and in place of going miles to inspect one, we all have to watch our step in order to avoid one.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

A murderess.

Two words. I can see what those two words do to you. I can feel the shudder that goes through you. The sick horror of that frantic, brutal mind . . .

A murderess.

You'd hate to meet one, wouldn't you? You'd shrink away from her and feel that no punishment was too bad for a woman who could hammer another woman to death . . . who could stab, shoot, poison living flesh into fragments.

That's how you feel about murderesses, I know. I felt that way about them once. I don't now. For now I know many murderesses. And a murderess is a surprising thing.

You wouldn't, for instance, suspect that a murderess likes to embroider curtains. Pale coral roses on rough green linen. Gentle white lillies on soft blue scarves. They do! They're doing it over in San Quentin now . . . sitting around quietly of an afternoon, as women will, chatting, humming, exchanging silk and stitches, working on the hanging for the new House Beautiful.

The House Beautiful, a strange thing to be built in a prison! Yet that's where it's being built, in the new women's prison of the Tehachepi Mountains of California. A women's prison where thousands of acres of sunny meadow and wind-swept ridge will be opened for the healing of sick souls . . . where hands that have touched only filth and cruelty can clean themselves with the planting of flowers, the sowing of fruits, the mothering of tiny chicks and calves and rabbits. And in the midst of it all, the House Beautiful—

A little old farm house which was once a home—now a gentle, peaceful haven for those who have never known a home. A little house, without bars, without hate—where there's free peace and cheer and bright new hope, waiting for any one who enters its kindly door. The sort of a place those numbered women never knew.

Would they have become numbered women if they had known a place like that?

Would they have wallowed in ugliness if they had walked in beauty?

So over in San Quentin today the women are sitting around in the afternoons, as women will, embroidering curtains for their sad, unknown sisters who have followed the same grim trail. Pale faces, pale hands, fading eyes, bending over bird, flight and rose wreath and cluster of gentle lilies.

Perhaps in those bending faces you would see only murderess and forger, thief and drug addict, vagabond and poor, drab skulker of the streets.

But if you could know them as I know them, behind the prison pallor of that pitiful barred flesh, you would see something else.

You would see the House Beautiful.

In each poor, shamed body, a House Beautiful.

Some secret place that even murder could not mar—some hidden hope that no robbery could defile—

Bird flight, rose wreath and lily cluster, standing sweet, serene within the bloody rim of some black dream.

More than a cottage, that old farm house in the new women's prison. A secret dream built plain wood and stone . . . that secret dream each numbered woman holds in her own heart.

Sob stuff? Perhaps. Better perhaps, to crush that secret dream. Better to treat a murderess as though she were all bloody hands.

Yet seeing Clara Philips sitting there—stitching rose garlands with a killer's tortured hands—I wonder. To kill—as they killed? Coop them in ugliness—poison them with hate—

Or let them make and see the beauty that is in their hearts?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Re-Birth

Oh, there are marvels greater than the spring
With all its flowers and song
Sweeter than scents the April breezes fling
Where larks and linnets throng.

There is a strong resurgence of the soul
Which comes from deeps unknown
When life lies shattered, nothing sound or whole
When every faith has flown.

When being like the wind-tossed flotsam drifts
Upon each changing tide.
There comes this power that disrents and lifts
And will not be denied.

When strife is past, when strength has ebbed away
And every conflict ends,
When dreams are done and idols all are clay
The primal force ascends

It shapes it drives it fashions life anew
Restless never till
Until it sees that soul where hope seemed through Reborn in work and will.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and came a dazzling walking stick with a jade knob from Shanghai but no notion who sent it. And Maj. H. O. and Morris Aleshire stopped by and we discussed Jimmy Lucas, the self-styled "axletree of the world."

So across town learning a former chauffeur who objected to night work is in the employ of George Jessel, Broadway's most persistent stay-out. A hulabaloo in front of a skyscraper, a young lady having flung herself out a high window which made me giddy.

Dinner with the Lee Olwells and to a variety show, offering the poorest clap-trap any of us ever saw. Home by midnight and a cable there which I hoped might set me off on a long sea voyage in a fortnight but disappointed. To bed reading "Allay-Oop," a book entirely of pictures.

A guest at luncheon today was garrulous about his travels, mentioning among other things he had crossed the Pacific 13 times. The remark evidently worried a colored servant who came in several hours later with a quizzical expression. "That gem'men say he crossed the Pacific 13 times," he observed. "That would leave him on the other side, wouldn't it?"

And there was a corking capsule temperance sermon by a man who stepped out of the Salvation Army ranks at Columbus Circle with: "I was drunk for 10 years and the fun was never worth the headaches." He said no more.

Physical culturists say the most graceful man in the world is Alfredo Codona, a circus aerialist. A Mexican, slight of figure, he is the only man to swing into a triple somersault from a trapeze and catch his partner in a handclasp. He is the husband of another famed aerialist, Lillian Leitzel.

The captivating Miss Leitzel twirls a hundred or more revolutions, holding by her right hand to a ring at the top of the circus tent and without a net. She has been repeatedly warned she will eventually lose use of her arm, but she dismisses such fears with a laugh. And carries on.

The bare-head enthusiasts claim a victory in the announcement that one of New York's largest retail hat shops is going out of business.

It used to be said on Broadway the chorus girl's breakfast was "a Morning Telegraph and a cigaret." Today the popular breakfast along the stem is served at 4 in the afternoon and consists of two raw eggs, well drenched with Worcestershire sauce—taken at a gulp.

* * *

John Mason, late actor, is reputed to have introduced the egg breakfast to the Rialto. He picked it up at the Savage Club in London, where it was known as a splendid revivifier after a loose night. Beerbohm Tree invented it.

* * *

The old Knickerbocker used to serve what they called a "night-out breakfast" to the bloods. It consisted of a cup of steaming black coffee to be drunk straight, and followed by a small cup of chilled tomato juice and a poached egg.

It got out of my hand before I could fix it up.

Text for Today

The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness, but is long-suffering to us ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.—II Peter, iii:9.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Isn't it a fact that you fear to appear as good as you really are, lest you be ridiculed?

At times you feel a bit sentimental and sympathetic, but give no indication of the fact because you don't want to seem weak and mushy.

Many times you have been inclined to break through your hard veneer and act like a human being in a normal state.

But you restrained yourself in your usual cold, unfeeling manner.

Somehow you have gained the impression that superior persons are indifferent to the general affairs of life—to obvious things.

You think you should not seem interested in small matters.

Things that arouse others to enthusiasm you do not consider worthy of your attention.

You have invented a certain character and are assuming what you think to be its interpretation.

Consequently you never are really natural.

You are living a character foreign to your own disposition.

You may make friends who admire your pose, but they don't like you for yourself, only for what they think you are, and sometime you will forget the pose.

(Copyright, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.)

ISN'T IT SO?

A really modest girl is one who hates to go out on a windy day.

Some people never know when they are licked and others get so used to it they don't mind.

Some men are never satisfied. Many a man who wants the earth kicks like a steer if he gets a little dust in his eyes.

Another way to obtain a certain kind of notoriety is by being the first in your community to have your driving license revoked.

Another way to help train daughters is to place a large mirror behind the kitchen sink.

Some women are so popular until their husbands make a little money and they get to be social climbers.

Religion may help you to forgive your enemies, but only a miracle can make you forgive the success of your friends.

The irritating thing about an egotist is not that he is pleased with himself, but that he expects everybody else to be pleased with him.
